The End of Roosters Tilden and Hendricks in Tuscarora Valley.

Since the November election Rev. Mr. Olewin, a Methodist clergyman serving the Port Royal Circuit, presented Mr. Daniel Con, one of his parishioners, with a pair of splendid roosters, with the understanding that the one was to be permanently named Tilden and the other Hendricks.

The birds of Tilden enjoyed themselves highly in their new home, but a time of calamity came. Hendricks was the first to yield to the decrees of fate; it came in the way: The rooster of the name just mentioned, but a short time since flew onto the chimney of an open barrel that stood on end.

The place seemed to exalt the bird, and he walked around on the brick proudly, but by an unguarded step he lost his balance and fell down into the barrel and broke his neck.

The fatal accident did not seem to affect Tilden. His strut was as full of pride as if his companion still divided the attention and admiration of all the hens. Last week, however, swift-footed fate came along and claimed him too as one of her victims.

He had become predatory in his inclinations. Indeed he had become predatory in his habits, and when the wren which he would fly away to his master's corn-crib and steal corn from, through the crevices. While on an expedition of that kind, last week he got his head into a crack, turned his head too far to one side, and, in the effort to extricate his enlarged head, banged himself by the neck till he was dead.

So short and ignominious was the end of roosters Tilden and Hendricks, in Tuscarora Valley.

Turning the Tables.

A Chicago paper says: The president of one of the banks of this city recently was struck by a brilliant idea. To impress the clerks with a due sense of his watchfulness and their responsibility, he would have them "shadowed" by a detective.

He did so, and every day or so would call one of the young men into his private room and address him with severity, something after the fashion: "Young man, you left the bank at nineteen and a half minutes past four yesterday afternoon. You made a bee-line for Dearborn street, declining on the way to purchase matches and suspenders, and telling a venerable man who poked an advertising do-lager into your diaphragm to go to a place where there is no ice on the sidewalks and the probabilities always indicate an area of high temperature. You also winked at a stray widow with false teeth. Arrived at Dearborn street, you entered the store of a publican and sinner named Mackin, had a hot Scotch whisky with not too much sugar in it, invited the barkeeper to take something himself—an invitation which was firmly but respectfully declined—and had a red-hot oyster on a fork.

Thence proceeding to a billiard room, the name of which is known to the directors, you played four games of billiards, losing three and being struck for as many rounds of drinks. In addition to this you had three other tips and a cigar—a Concha.

Lighting this, you proceeded to a restaurant, the name of which is advertised in the Chicago Tribune, where you dined heartily and inexpensively on tomato soup, raw oysters, broiled chicken, apple pie, fried potatoes, celery and a number of other articles, the check, including a bottle of Bass ale, being $2.65.

In payment you gave the cashier a $5 greenback. A 1.639,456—if you deem it necessary I can describe the change you received.

Thence proceeding to the billiard room, you played billiard till forty-seven minutes after nine, when you proceeded to a gambling den that I might, but need not, particularize, where you backed the tiger $9.50 worth. You got a final drink at a quarter past twelve a. m. and went home in car No. 238, West Madison street line. I do not recite this to ensure you or find fault with you in any way, but merely to show you that the officials of this institution keep a close watch upon all their employees.

Honestly is the best policy. That is all. The clerk would retire terrified and not embudge another dollar for over a week. The other day, however, they got a new clerk at this bank, a quiet and innocent looking young fellow. His comrades told him about the trials he would have to undergo, whereat he smiled a pensive smile and said that would be all right.

Yesterday afternoon the president wink at the messenger, he entered the president's room. When the old man had got through, he replied, calmly: "In the main your information is accurate, though it is bitter, remember I don't put too much of it in my third cigar cocktail, and my biggest run at billiards was sixteen, not seventeen. Yesterday afternoon, at 3:28:37 you left the bank and proceeded direct to So-and-so's gambling hell, where you were braiced out of $1,709 mightily quick. You said when the ace came up loser for the ninth time that it beat the devil, and the dealer, who had slipped out two cards, remarked that he never remembered anything like it.

At the southeast corner of Clark and Washington streets you received a package of bills—I can tell the amount if you like—from the contractor for the building the bank is putting up. "This is your whack up of the day," were his exact words. Then you went home and had dinner. The oyster soup was slightly burned, as you very justly, but somewhat grumblingly observed, and after inventing a lie to your wife about having to attend a special meeting of the Clearing-house Association, you went to that little whelp's.

"Young man," said the president in an awful voice, "you have been guilty of an act of gross insubordination, not to speak of the lack of honorable feeling manifested in thus playing the spy. Another time I shall not overlook the offense, but out of regard for your widowed mother and your previous irreproachable conduct, I shall forgive you now. What is your salary?"

"One hundred dollars, sir."

"Clearing the cashier to $1,500 in future, dating from Jan. 1, 1877. This is a token of appreciation of your devotion to our interests and high integrity. This hundred dollar bill is a slight personal testimonial of regard. If at any time you are a little short of funds don't hesitate about borrowing from me. I treat a deep and affectionate interest in the welfare of my young men."

The clerk bowed his acknowledgments and was about to take his leave, when the president called him back and said: "There is, of course, nothing in it—positively nothing; still, you need not mention that little remembrance about the widow to any one. A joke—a joke."

The clerk winked at him respectfully and withdrew.

An oriental traveler describes this busy scene, witnessed on historic shores: "Our steamer landed on a beach which was the port of Antioch, where the disciples were first called Christians. There was no town at the water's edge, no people, no wharf. The passengers and the merchandise were put ashore in lighters, which ran up into the sand. A troop of camels, with their drivers, lay on the beach, ready to transfer the goods into the interior. Among the articles landed were boxes marked 'DR. J. C. AYER & CO., LOWELL, MASS., U. S. A.' showing that they contained medicines and whence they came. These with other goods were hoisted on the backs of camels, for transportation to Antioch. Thus the skill of the West sends back its remedies to heal the maladies of populations that inhabit those eastern shores, whence our spiritual umana came."—Windsor (Vt.) Chron.

ROBBERY OF A GATE HOUSE.—The toll gate house at Fankston, on the Boonshoro' and Hagerstown pike, was entered and robbed on Wednesday night of $100.88, $40 of it being in silver coin.

Three men came to the door, between 12 and 1 o'clock and demanded admission. Mr. Samuel Myers, the gate keeper, at first refused, but they told him that they wanted water for a man that had fallen off his horse in the road. The door was then opened and three masked men, armed with clubs and a knife, entered. Mr. Myers, immediately perceiving their intentions, "pitched into" them with the utmost vigor, and knocked one of them up against the door. But of course he was soon overpowered, and thrown down, having first received two pretty severe blows over the head with the pieces of fence stakes carried by the men. After Myers was down, one of the burglars was detailed to hold him while the others searched for the money. Although Mr. Myers is an old man, between 60 and 70 years of age, it was soon found that it could take two burglars to hold him down. As the second one came to the rescue of the first, Myers grabbed at his face and tore his nose off, but could not recognize him.

In the meantime the noise of the scuffle had aroused 17 year's grand daughter, who was sleeping up-stairs, and she called out of the window to Mr. F. Snelling, who, with two other men, came to the rescue as soon as possible. When they got to the front door the burglars were still in the house but escaped out of a back window, breaking the sash to get out.

Mr. Myers came out of the conflict without any serious injury further than being pretty well choked and with a couple of blows over his head. The Fankston people are loud in their praises of his valiant conduct. He has the clubs and two masks; one of the latter was found in a field near the house, the next morning.—Hagerstown Mail.

COMMODORE VANDERBILT said that his locomotives were made not to shine but for use. This is the case with

W. F. Snyder's Furniture. It is made to give satisfaction to those who purchase it. Sold very cheap for cash.

STUCK HIM IN THE BACK.—The Pottstown Ledger says that in that borough a man went to bed early, and his wife visited a neighbor, but forgot her key and was unable to enter the house or to awaken her husband. The couple who she had visited came to her assistance, and the man ratted at the second story window with a clothes prop. The sleeping husband bounced out of bed, seized his gun, slammed open the blinds and fired the gun out of the window to scare off supposed burglars. The women screamed and the matter was explained, but a young man who was conversing with his lady lone on the next corner, a long distance away, suddenly fled at his utmost speed, to the girl's amazement. Next day it was found that the load of shot had struck him in the back, but without serious injury.

INTERFERENCE IN EATING.—Men and women generally are respecting open-air banquets and suppers from daily overfeeding. Some one has said "brain work under feasting becomes a grievous task and bears the marks of a bungler." Horace Walpole wrote, "I have such lamentable proofs every day before my eyes of the stupefying qualities of beef, ale, and what I have contracted a most religious veneration for your spiritual nature. And only imagine that every day sea men who are mountains of roast beef, and only seem just roughly brawn out into outlines of human form, like the great rock of Proteus. I shudder when I see them brandish their knives in act to carve, and look upon them as savages that devour one another. I'll swear I see no difference between a country gentleman and a siren."

Greater issues than church or state hang upon the simple acts of eating and drinking, the first being a more frequent cause of intemperance than the second. In a sensitive organization these gross and exciting causes destroy the highest spiritual thought and aspiration, often leading to a craving for ignoble things utterly foreign to the pure and simple nature. This danger is also increased by its subtlety, and also by the countenance given it by adulated and cultivated people. If such abandon themselves to indulgence, and neither by precept nor example show forth the beauties of right living and self-control, what can be hoped for from those of inferior knowledge and understanding, uncontrollable habits and appetites, and undisciplined lives?—Herald of Health

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a continually increasing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the worst accumulations of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities or diseases that have lurked in the system for years soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful success in Scrofula, which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive diseases of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pruritus, Stomach, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuritis, Headache, Rheumatism, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhoea, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poison.
