FORGET ME NOT.

When Flora first her kingdom knew Went for h to call each flower that grew, One tiny thing of snowy hue Stood, with its crown of glist ning dew Forgotten there.

To Heaven it raised its tearful eve. Sent out a humble, timid sigh, That, wreathing with its fragrance there. Wound upwardly a silent prayer, Forget me not.

And Heaven, blue, unclouded, mild, Breathed smilingly upon the child A Benedicite-from above Of Heavenly grace and constant love, For e'er and e'er.

The floweret bowed its tiny head. Content to rest within its bed ; The dew drop caught Heaven's sparkling h Then faded, and the flower was blue Forget me not.

Thus blest and christened by the hand Of Heaven, it blooms all through the land ; Its gentle air, wee, modest face, Beseech for only humble grace. Forget me not.
