you how he conquered. It is a true story.

A shipping merchant in New York had purchased a cargo of wheat at the West. He intended to bring it on, and ship it to Charleston, S. C. His agent had sent him word that the price of wheat was likely to fall, and that, the sooner he got it to the South, the better: so the merchant was very anxious. He had all his men ready to take the wheat as soon as it should arrive, and to place it on his vessel.

At last it came; but this happened on a holiday. The night before, the merchant went to the superintendent, and said, "You must have the laborers work to morrow. It will be worth hundreds of dollars to me if I get my wheat off within a day or two. I will pay you all extra." The superintendent said he would try. He spoke to the men, and they all promised to give up their holiday. But what do you think? The next day the wheat arrived, and not a man on the ground to receive it. They had
