SPRING FEVER.

I know where summer woods are green Where summer shade is dark and deep, Where frondage forms a cooling screen, Where wide-leaved lilies lie asleep, And where the early blossoms blow; I know, I know, but cannot go.

I know where laughing waters fall, Where sapphire summer lakes are sprea-Where merry springs are musical, And brooks with fountains at the head, And where the lordly rivers flow. I know, I know, but cannot go.

I know where birds delight to sing, Where squirrels chatter at their play, Where bees sweep by on busy wing Where fragrance fills the dying day, And fireflies sparkle to and fro, I know, I know, but cannot go.

I know where ocean airs are free, Where salt waves dash upon the beach, Where bright sails glisten o'er the sea. Where rock and sand strange lessons teach Book dark as death, sand white as snow, I know, I know, but cannot go.

This wilderness of snow and brick Enfolds me still from day to day ; My soul is sad, my heart is sick, And yet I cannot slip away To pleasant places that I know, I know, I know, but cannot go

One pleasant morning, not long since I went down with two friends upon one of the wharves in Gotham, to get a view of the harbor. As we were standing quietly watching the shipping, our esort, Harry, exclaimed: "Why, what is this?" and he poked with a stick at something between two bales.

"Hallo! that's me, that is!" cried a shrill voice; and there slowly rose to view a curious specimen of humanity, bearing a general resemblance to a child of some six years, but probably more than twelve. His face was unique, small, droll, old and strangely pathetic in its drollness. "Look here, mister, what right 'as
