Republican Mass Meeting.

On last Thursday evening the quiet inhabitants of Richfield were aroused by the arrival of the Freeburg Cornet Band, which discoursed a number of pieces of entertaining music, after which a Republican meeting was organized.

Thomas Shellenberger was chosen President, and A. G. Shellenberger, George C. Zimmerman, T. C. Derr, George S. Metterling and C. S. Shellenberger, Vice Presidents. John H. Willis and C. S. Dunn were chosen Secretaries.

The President stated the object of the meeting, after which John W. Boon, of Philadelphia—better known as the Buckeye Blacksmith—addressed the meeting.

In his preliminary remarks he stated that he has been on the stump for fifty years. He pronounced the Greenback party a delusion and a snare. Gold and silver must ever remain the basis of exchange among civilized people.

NOTE.

Hunters are hereby cautioned against trespassing on the lands of the undersigned in Fernhugh township, to shoot birds or squirrels, without the consent of the owner.

The Kearney Democracy in the interest of Ben Butler, took forcible possession of the hall in Boston in which it was conducted to hold the Democratic State Convention. They took possession early, at 5 o'clock in the morning. The result is, a complete split in the Democratic party. Massachusetts has taught a kind of freedom that threatens to run into license and violence. The next election will tell whether she can preserve herself against the turbulent elements of Butler, Kearney & Co.

The way to get people to read the Bible is to say they shall not read it. Down in New Haven, Conn., they got the question up in the schools, as to whether the Bible should be read or not read in the schools, and a great agitation took place over the question, which was left to a vote of the people for decision. The vote stood 4,881 for Bible reading, to 1,963 against Bible reading; and now it is presumed that by this time next year the people in that country will know all about the Good Book. What can be done in this place to induce people to read the Bible more?

The Huntington Globe says: Chief of Police Westbrook arrested two young men at Fisher's saw-mill one day last week for playing cards. They were fined $2 each. It is a sad reflection that many of our boys and young men are worse than wasting the best years of their life. Youth and early manhood thrown away, is a sure forerunner of failure, disgrace, want and misery in after years.

A horse disease has broken out in Walker township. The disease seems to be located in the head of the animal; no external swelling takes place; the eyes discharge large quantities of offensive matter, and corruption that has an offensive smell about it runs from the nostrils in large quantities. The animal that gets the disease better or dies within ten days. A valuable horse owned by David Sieber, residing in Walker township, died of the disease a few days ago, and two others are ailing.

Some few nights ago, some thieves or a thief stole a ham owned by Cyrus Morrison, residing in this place, and took it out into the back part of the lot, and there cut it into two pieces with a meat saw they had taken with the meat, and leaving one piece of the ham in the lot with the saw, where it was found in the morning. The other piece they took with them.

Several nights ago some sounder of sounders unlocked the front door of the house of B. P. Hoover waterhouser, in this place. They found nothing that was worth the trouble, except a bottle of Alcohol which they took. They could not get into the next room, and then went around to the kitchen, and climbed into the kitchen through a window where they found a plate of roasted apples, which they carried away, plate and all. A key which was found on Hoover's workbench, upon some inquiry it was found to belong to the kitchen door of Mrs. Garman's house.

Last Friday William Kenwell, a citizen of Fayette township, son of John Kenwell, went to Shade mountain on a gunning expedition. Failing to return on that day, and on Saturday, his friends became alarmed, and on Sunday morning started their feelings of uneasiness for his welfare to neighbors. One man told another of the missing, and the other man told another, and the whole neighborhood was aroused to search the woods and mountain. About sundown on Sabbath evening some of the party in search of the missing man, heard the bark of a little dog away up on the mountain side, north of John Houghawout's house, and having heard that Kenwell had taken a little dog with him to the woods, concluded to look up the dog that was then barking. They did so. Before they had quite reached the place where he barked from, he came to them, and then ran back. They followed. He led them to his master, who was lying on the ground, dead, with a gunshot wound through his head, through the temple. His gun, empty, with the hammer broken, lay on the ground, about 12 feet distant. All the game that was with him was one squirrel, which was in a basket, with a bottle of honey, which had been using to bait bees. The basket hung on his left arm, which, with basket and contents, lay under him. He lay on his face, and from what people say who were on the ground when he was found, he must have dropped forward when he was shot, off a rock or boulder that was some two feet higher than the surrounding objects. His right arm was swung around across his back. His gun was a smooth-bore rifle. A load of shot entered his left and passed out of his right thigh, loosening in its passage the bones of the forehead, and making such openings in the skull that his brains oozed out on his hat, which was crushed up under his face. The verdict of the inquest has not yet been filed.

Since Ben Butler has put himself at the head of the fighting democracy, and took possession of a hall at 5 o'clock in the morning in Boston, the gun runs— "Pleasyme Butler's coming, Pleasyme Butler's come to town."

A CORRESPONDENT OF THE Economist (London) writes from Vienna showing that some of the expected adverse reports respecting foreign harvests have not been received, and purchases have become much more careful in consequence. It learns that the United States harvest has been good, both in quantity and in quality, and that the amount of wheat raised is greater than it has ever been before. Last year it was 333,000,000 bushels, and this year 350,000,000. Great Britain and Ireland calculate upon a "good average harvest." In France there is little corn in store, and the harvest has been "poor," with wheat at "20 per cent above the average." Belgium expects "a medium harvest," and Holland "a crop good for all descriptions," with the exception of rye. In Scandinavia and the Russian and German provinces along the Baltic coast the harvest has been "a fairly good one," except as to corn. The same is said of Poland, Roumania, and Central Russia, but the harvest of Switzerland has been 10 to 20 per cent below the average; that of Italy has been "very" good in regard to quantity, but the quality has suffered from the damp. In Bavaria the harvest has been "very good," in Siberia good as to rye, but wheat there and elsewhere in Prussia has been inferior in quality, but that which is "first-rate." In Austria and Hungary the result is "very good indeed."
