Some three years ago a wealthy old gentleman at Watertown died, and about $800,000 from his estate went to a son, who was an individual banker, and his two sons had ranked it, and was known to be very rich, in less than a year after this windfall he failed for over half a million, and paid about ten cents on the dollar.

At Odgensburg, the other day Judson's bank, a similar institution to the Paddock concern at Watertown, ranking every way as well, failed for $400,000, less than five years ago a brother of the proprietor died, and left him but $800,000.

A man near Ulva, New York, recently died, who had spoken but twice in fifty years. His silence was self-imposed, in accordance with a vow rashly taken. He had managed however, to amass a fortune of $24,000, which he left to a nephew with the injunction, "Don't say a word."

There was a strange scene at the depot at Springfield, Mass., a day or two ago, on the arrival of a body which was on its way to Troy for interment. It was some time before they could be made to understand that the remains were not those of their friend, but a stranger en route westward.

After the tooth was drawn the animal expressed his gratification in many ways.
