GRANT'S ARABIAN MORSES. General Grant's pair of Arabian staffrons, presented by the Sultan of Tur-Rev. arrived here two days ago. I went yesterday with Milton Sayler to bave a look at them. I confess I was disappointed. The horses were said to have been selected as the best out of a stud of seven hundred belonging to the Sultan, and I expected to see something remarkable. Instead I saw a pair of small gray borses, which at first led me to believe that we were being guyed by some practical juker, but closer inspection convinced my companion that the horses were very fine. They are both far below in height of the ordinary horse, but they are thinner and longer than our ordinary sonies, and really look frail They do not seem to have the chest and leg muscles of our race by Rev.
