SCIENTIFIC.

A Scientific Paradox. - The very remarkable phenomenon of ice and snow forming in the brief space of a few minutes when the temperature indicated 87 deg. Farenheit, and men were working in their shirt sleeves, occurred at the Union Pacific rallroad company's transfer depot. Andrew Rosewater, who was near by, was called by the laborers to witness the strange phenom enon, and, if possible, explain it. To his surprise he observed a large portion of the surface of a barrel of covered with about half an inch of what appeared to be ice and snow. To make sure he was not deceived he touched it and really found it cold and frosty matter, in a semi-solid state, re-sembling snow in that peculiar halffrozen and thawing condition to which the term slush is usually applied. He next took a portion to his lips, and, though cold upon touch, it immediately dissolved into a gaseous vapor, emitting the distasteful odor of kerosene. Mr. Rosewater, who now became considerscraped off all the formation from the surface. Under it he observed a very fine streak between the staves of the barrel, through which, when it was turned downward or partially inclined, paper handkerchiefs! And now they have got so bad that they do like things are not as constant as are matured ones, the gasoline seemed to leak. The men have got so bad that they do like things are not as constant as are matured ones, who stood by then informed him that if he turned the barrel so that it would leak, the formation of snow and ice I wonder if, when a farmer buys a cow, now-a-days, he carries it home tied up in a paper-bag; or, when Barnum buys an elephant, he takes it to num buys an elephant, he takes it to his menageric in a huge paper contrivance—like this, only bigger.

CHEMICALS FOR HOUSEHOLD USE .- it is surprising, considering how many women have been instructed in chemistry in school days, to find how few housekeepers make any use of chemicals in various household processes, Especially is this the case in cleansing processes. The washing of clothes is usually wholly accomplished by rubbing the clothes on the washboard and with noother detergent than soon. The making of the cleans of the them out far more than use, and if housekeepers only knew, or, if knowing, they would take advantage of the fact, that many washing compounds will almost entirely cleanse clothes which are soaked in them over night, and thus almost entirely do away with the labor and wear of the washboard, wash-day might be robbed of half its Trifolium repens?" Recipes for washing fluids, the principal ingredients of which are soda, ash, ammonia and lime, can be found in nearly every household recipe book, and they are very cheap and harmless. All such washing compounds are useful and convenient for cleaning woodwork, panels and carpets in a house; also in washing dishes and securing that desideratum of housekeepers-clean dish-clothes. Ammonia is a simple cheap and harmless chemical and should be bought by the quart and kept in every family. A few drops added to water will cleanse children's hair and make it soft and sweet; it is an admirable disinfectant to remove the odor of perspiration; it will remove in every family. For cleansing teeth and sweetening the breath, a few flannels. Salicylic acid is a perfectly odorless and harmless yet powerful disinfectant, and for many disinfecting uses in the household is invaluable. It is very cheap and convenient in form. In these days when to stay various forms of disease is so important, mothers and housekeepers would do well to give study and thought to these things, and to try to make their knowledge of cience practicat.
