H. T. HELMBOLD'S THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS What should I seek, and what desire, So that my days may joyous be ? Where shall I find the hidden fire For faith that never may cease to be ? First, in myself my search must rest Ere it go forth upon its quest. Bright my own soul, pure my intent. COMPOUND So shall I walk to find my joy : Self in the common welfare blent ; Swift to upbuild, slow to destroy ; Knowing each heart hath secret good, Often net known or understood.

FLUID EXTRACT

Never be held in light esteem The blessing another's work may show So must the measure be just and fair For another's goodness, toil, or prayer. To walk where the sunshine loves to fall, Or kneel in the shadow, subdued and still Hear every voice that in love may call, Patient in strife, resigned in ill. So shall each day hold something blest, And the soul attain its longed for rest. O thou whose heart is a world of care. Whose thoughts in a fever come and go Strive, with the strength that is born of prayer Peace in thy spirit first to know And seeking ever some human good.

Welcome must each true impulse seem Feit by brother, or friend, or foe ;
