GENERAL ITEMS.

Five hundred freight cars left Williamsport on Monday this week.

Charles R. Macomber, formerly of Clearfield county, now of Rawlinsburg, West Virginia had both legs off by a circular saw on the 20th of August.

The day is not far distant when Pennsylvania will lead the leather trade of the country. Her tanneries are now very large in extent and number.

Paris horse owners frequently place the most absurd restrictions upon their tenants. Some will not allow a dog to be kept; others will not permit any pet whatsoever, and some even object to children in the house.

Coal operators have concluded to reduce the price of coal 40 to 60 percent.

Fifteen years ago yesterday the National Democratic Convention assembled at Chicago, and adopted resolutions declaring that the war was a failure.

At that time the rebellion was in its last throes.

Manford Reynolds, a prisoner in the jail at Scottsburg, Ind., being weary of life, bribed a small boy to buy for him two ounces of cyanide potassium.

The boy secured the poison, and took it to the jail, where he mixed some harmless coloring with water, and sent the dose to Reynolds.

On Thursday Reynolds mustered his courage and drank the water and bidding everybody good bye, fell down in prayer.

He prayed and prayed, and did not know for a long time the joke which he had been made the victim.

Because the Rev. Father Reiver, pastor of the Catholic Church at West-Phillips, Mich., refused to permit the burial of Miss Reynolds, she was taken place from the church, and the parishoners a few days ago, broke down the doors, demolished the furniture and drove the priest from the town. It is charged by the parishioners that Father Reiver has for many months acted with unbelief and altogether un-Christian behavior.

In Baltimore there are forty peach-packing establishments. Few, if any, of these houses employed a less number of hands than two hundred, whilst several of them reach eight hundred or one thousand, and these are exclusive of those engaged in the manufacture of tin cans and the packing cases. The "hands" are all paid by the piece, so their wages vary according to their dexterity and the number of hours which they devote to labor.

Last week, there were many peaches "put up" in that market as there were during the entire season of 1878.

At Freeport, L. I., a willow that now measures fourteen feet in circumference was thrust into the ground 45 years ago, by Henry Smith then a mere boy, after giving it a switch to drive cattle from the plain.

One day recently as John A. Tread was mowing a meadow for Clayton Simmerman, near Glasboro, N. J., a hornet stung him on the left jugular vein. At first he paid but momentary attention, but proceeding a dozen yards further his blood seemed on fire in every vein to the remotest parts and in a few minutes his face came out all over the skin. With assistance he reached the house about noon, when a chill fever set in, and he died, and although under two quills he says he was "almost frozen".

Dr. H. D. Herrtage arrived, gave medicine to counteract the poison and in a short time the patient was out of danger. He worked no more that day, but since has felt no inconvenience.

There is a theatre in Wilmington and the citizens of that place are fond of what they call the weaved drama. One night recently Miss Carrie Punnkette appeared in "Lady Arden's Secret" and, of course, fairly flooded the pit with tears.

In the midst of the pathetic scenes, however, two Wilmington dogs broke up to one another and were soon fighting in close proximity to the stage. Miss Punnkette was obliged to retire until the Wilmingtons had enjoyed a five minutes' performance with the dogs as chief characters.

Martha Hickling is described by the local reporter at Hillsboro, Texas as "a prairie rose." She was tall and fair and her blue eyes were most bewitching. Some months ago Alva Woods, a tall handsome, dark-haired man of thirty, wooed and won the rose. He proved a villain. Miss Hickling's parents, mother-of-fact people, brought suit in the Hillsboro Court. As the trial proceeded the counsel for Woods said that they had not the ghost of a chance to save their man from the penitentiary, he had done what was known in Texas law as a penitentiary crime, and so they proposed that a settlement be made by the immediate marriage of the parties. The judge was glad to perform the ceremony at once and on Thursday afternoon a week an infant was given a dose of medicine intended for its mother and almost instantly killed.

While James Yoder, of Lohachville, Berks county, was treading the other day, a 7 year old son jumped from over-head in the barn to the three-hung floor and was caught by the prong of a fork held by hands of a man who was taking straw from the machine. The fork entered the head back of the left eye. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried into the house where he lingered until the afternoon when he died.

The pluck of a Philadelphia lawyer is thus told by the Record of Aug. 28: Colonel William B. Mann created a sensation in the Centre county Court, at Bellefonte, yesterday. It will be remembered that on Tuesday afternoon he was taken seriously ill at his office with an attack of dysentery and inflammation of the bowels. He was removed to his home at Fifteenth street Girard avenue and by night had recovered somewhat. He had an appointment to meet at Bellefonte yesterday which required his attention, being the trial of the well known Peter Herdic. Accompanied by Mrs Mann and a friend, the Colonel started to keep his engagement. A compartment in a special car was procured for him and he reached his destination safely about ten o'clock in the morning. He was so weakened by his sudden illness that he was unable to walk, and was carried to the Court House on pillows, where he appeared and although so ill defended his client with the vigor for which he is so well known. A dispatch received by the members of the family here the afternoon, was to the effect that the Colonel had improved somewhat and would probably appear in Harrisburg this afternoon to defend Messrs Kemble and Barber. The news excited the curiosity of the lawyer in the Court on pillows in a country town created a sensation which caused the barrister's name to be on every tongue.

GENERAL ITEMS.

Peter Herdic was acquitted by a Bellefonte Court. The charge, was obtaining money by means of false pretenses.

Col. Bernard captured a small Indian camp near Big Creek, Idaho, on the 10th, but the savages escaped and are being pursued.

George W. Jones, formerly United States Senator from Iowa, has been forced by poverty to seek a nomination for Sheriff of Dubuque county. He is eighty years old.

Perasmuson Bill is known on the plains as one of the daring outlaws of the age. His real name is William T. Chambers. He is about 35 years of age, weighs about 140 pounds; has dark brown hair, bright blue eyes and projecting eyebrows. He was born in the mountains of North Carolina. Having served throughout the war, first under one flag and then another, he was captured by the Unionists in 1867. He was sentenced to life imprisonment but he did not stay in the penitentiary. He escaped from jail, went to the nearest saloon, and, with the handcuffs still clinging to his wrists, ordered drinks. The Sheriff soon put in an appearance. Bill smiled at the Sheriff, and explained that he only wanted a little fun and would go back to the penitentiary if he was caught. The Sheriff pleased at the easy capture unlocked the restraints. No sooner did he unlock the restraints than he sprang through a window, mounted a horse and escaped. He has been at large since that time, though a $5,000 reward is offered for him.
