

MIFELINTOWN. B. F. SCHWEIER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

It does not suit the Democracy to talk too loudly on the question of a king, for their leaders went into a state of rebellion...

An attempt was made to blow up the czar of Russia last week. The men who were to explode the machine mistook the train and set off the blast...

The Baltimore Gazette says that General Grant has been offered the managing editorship of the Philadelphia Ledger at a salary of $25,000 a year.

Last Wednesday the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company bought 50,149 shares of its own stock, at $50 per share.

Democrats who take colic when they are talked to about the grand turnout of people wherever General Grant appears, may find solace in the fact that just such evasions were extended to George Washington when he traveled after the Revolutionary war.

There was great rioting among the Democracy in Philadelphia last week, on the occasion of the holding of their primary election. A number of men were severely beaten, and one man named Reilly was killed.

The cost of a Philadelphia church fair is narrated thus, by a dispatch under date of the 3d inst. A fair was held last night in the Presbyterian church, corner of Broad and Oxford streets...

It is feared that the Indians that have been put to school for text book learning, at Carlisle and other places, will return to the plains and settle down in their old haunts.

Under the above head an exchange writes: An attempt was made in years gone by to protect the United States against an influx of convicts, paupers and lunatics from European countries.

Speaking on the tariff question, lately, Senator Blaine said: Generally, I find a man very much oppressed with the tax on coffee.

A wild story is current in Oringsville, Ky., of a man floating over the place in the air. Several persons declared they saw him.

On the 27th of last month nearly all the wells in Strengsburg, Pa., were dried up.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Buys Its Own Stock.

One-Third of a Century Old. NEARLY 8,000 MILES OF TRACK. Eleven Hundred Locomotives, 1,000 Passenger Cars, 30,000 Freight Cars.

Under date of last Thursday the Philadelphia North American published the most interesting article relative to the Pennsylvania Railroad.

To day the city of Philadelphia, the senior and until now the largest partner in the ownership of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with its magnificent lines of road running from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, and fully equipped with every facility for transacting the freight and passenger business of a continent...

There could hardly be a stronger endorsement of the management of this great corporation than the fact that its assumption of the city's interest, and the removal of the last vestige of incorporation influence upon its counsel, is felt to be adding rather than taking away from the value of its stock.

In all this time there has never been a change of management. Directors have come and gone, but the executive officers have grown up with the road. To J. Edgar Thompson's untiring energy was due the completion of the line through to Pittsburgh, with a rapidity remarkable in those days...

The Tramp Influx. Under the above head an exchange writes: An attempt was made in years gone by to protect the United States against an influx of convicts, paupers and lunatics from European countries.

Speaking on the tariff question, lately, Senator Blaine said: Generally, I find a man very much oppressed with the tax on coffee. We took that off in June, 1872. Prior to that time we had been getting $8,900,000 a year out of it.

A wild story is current in Oringsville, Ky., of a man floating over the place in the air. Several persons declared they saw him. A woman describes him as making extravagant gestures while, and then rising on top of a light.

STATE ITEMS.

A young man named William James was found suffocated by gas from a lantern, near Fernside, Lehigh county, on Saturday morning a week.

Mrs. Stephen Tyler, of Pottstown, who was born 20 years ago from an explosion of gas, died from her injuries on Saturday night.

A gentleman from Altoona says that there are now employed in the car and machine shops at that place 3,300 men, and that the pay rolls this month will not be less than $140,000.

A negro met his death in the southern part of Erie county in a very peculiar manner. He had stolen a pig and killed it, and in order to carry it to his home he put it on a sled and he and the pig fell on the ice.

A woman calling herself the Queen of Caran is doing an enormous business in the Southwest, particularly among the negroes. She rides in a discarded circus chariot, wearing velvet and goggles and accompanied by a band of musicians.

A steam canal boat is being constructed for the Delaware and Lehigh canal. New York has a standing premium of some thousands of dollars for successful steam canal navigation.

The largest poisons ever trapped in Chester county are now caught there, and sold in the Philadelphia market.

In Meadville the two year old daughter of Benjamin Spaulding was instantly killed by falling from a chair on a pair of shears, which entered her throat severing the jugular vein.

Indiana county furnished Philadelphia with 37,000 pounds of poultry for Thanksgiving week.

A party of Clinton county hunters had fourteen deer strung up in the woods at the head of Baker's run on Saturday night a week with nine deer.

Five students of Allegheny College Meadville, have been suspended for hazarding the suspended ones and their sympathizers went in procession through the street of Meadville on Wednesday preceded by a brass band and carrying banners bearing inscriptions the reverse of complimentary to the faculty.

On Thursday evening a week about eight o'clock a stranger appeared at the front of the house of Mr. Joseph Kinch in Elmburg, and finding the owner was not in, bound and gagged his wife. He then searched the house, but obtained nothing. Mrs. Kinch is badly injured.

Charles Newman, who had been missing from Millrod for more than a year, and was long supposed to be dead, returned home the other day to find that his purpose of letting his wife go to the bad had been accomplished. He found out her unfaithfulness, and soon after he went away she became an open prostitute.

Henry Ammon, of Cameron township, Lancaster county, was the owner of a bull which he concluded to slaughter in consequence of the ferocious character of the animal. Daniel Buck, an experienced butcher, was engaged, but when Mr. Buck stationed himself with rifle in hand, to bring down the animal, the bull made a sudden attack upon him.

Before the knife could be procured the infuriated animal rose and made another attack on the butcher, and repeated these attacks three successive times, although receiving a rifle ball through the head each time. The animal was finally killed by well-directed blows from an axe.

The Altoona Tribune of the 3rd inst says; Alexander Kling and Martin Turnbaugh, of Eldorado, yesterday made some business up Bell's gap. They took the train in this city and went down to Bell's Mills and from thence went up the public road, where their business called them. On returning in the afternoon what was their surprise to find a five pronged buck and two dogs in the middle of the highway, at a point about one mile and a half above Bell's Mills, engaged in a severe fight.

They immediately went to the assistance of the dog, when the latter with a yell and left Kling and Turnbaugh to fight the battle alone, while they rested and enjoyed the fun. The deer gave his new antagonists a heavy fight, and at one time was likely to get the mastery, but they finally succeeded in throwing the deer down. Turnbaugh then got out his penknife and managed to cut the deer's throat. It weighed 160 pounds, and was brought up on the mail train in the evening.

Mr. Kling took hold of the buck's hind legs to assist in throwing him down, but it was like taking hold of the hind legs of a mule. He reckoned without his host. The deer had been shot and wounded perhaps one or two years ago in the fore shoulder, which had healed up, leaving one leg about six inches shorter than the other. Messrs Kling and Turnbaugh are proud of their hard fought victory over this fine specimen of the fleet footed tribe of the mountains and well they may be. They are both stout, rugged men, which was an important factor in his success.

The Chambersburg bank robber and forger of general repute, Ralph L. Rolland, who is serving out a lengthy sentence in the Eastern Penitentiary took advantage of the religious services in the corridor on Sunday last to create a sensation among the worshippers. He first issued from his cell flourishing his case knife, which had been ground to a keen edge on the iron step in his cell and threatened to kill the keeper. The latter drew his revolver, and, covering Rolland, forced him to give up his knife.

The convict who has for months past been flogging insanity, then sprang over the railing and landed among the people. He kept yelling that he was being starved, although his robust physical condition was sufficient contradiction to this. After a desperate fight Rolland was secured and taken to his cell. The officials as a precaution, removed his bed, and now compel him to sleep on blankets on the floor and eat without a knife.

A telegram from Crestline, Ohio, says an unknown burglar was shot there Thursday night by Mr. Folz, who sleeps in a boot and shoe store. The burglar was at the back door boring a panel, when Folz shot him dead from within. Two other burglars were frightened away.

GENERAL ITEMS.

The Brooklyn bridge will cost, by the time it is finished, not less than $15,000,000. The first estimate of the cost was less than $12,000,000.

The new Pullman palace cars are very luxurious, costing each $15,000. Ordinary passenger cars cost $4,000; drawing-room cars, $6,000; mail and baggage cars, $2,000; box cars $4,000.

The late ferry in Wall street New York is said to have cost "the laubs"—that is those who were shorn—between five and ten millions of dollars.

The Atlantic and Great Western railroad is managed by accommodating officers a lady passenger in one of its trains Thanksgiving evening, gave birth to a child in a palace car, the train being stopped at Sagerstown, Crawford county, until the momentum affair was over, some of the passengers amusing themselves meanwhile in running foot races.
