The instant the air touches the metal the fasion takes place. He fur-ther says: "By furnace heat it requires many hours, and sometimes many days. to anneal metals. By a recent discov ery which I have made I can anneal bars of iron or steel at the rate of one foot per second, thus increa ing the ductility of the metal 100 per cent, without the use of other fuel than that contained in the metal itself. I simply enlock the occluded (latent) heat. It becomes sensible and enlarges the metal, and by the method of doing this the enlargement is made perceament: that is, it loes not contract to its original limit. Now, annealing and fusing fron and steel in one second of time may seem absurd, but is pevertheless a fact, and reduced to practical utility in the arts."
