There is an advertisement in our columns to which we take much pleasure in referring our readers, because we believe in it and can conscientiously and heartily recommend it. We refer to Hall's Hair Renewer. We remember many cases in our midst of old and middle-aged people who formerly wore grey hair, or whose locks were thin and faded, but who now have presentable heads, and with no little pride announce to their friends that they haven't a grey hair in their heads. It is a pardonable pride, and the world would be better off, if there was more of it, for when the aged make themselves attractive to others they are more certain to win and retain the esteem and respect to which a burden of well spent years entitles them. Try Hall's Hair Renewer if age or disease has thinned or whitened your locks and you will thank us for our advice.—Pan-Handle News, Williamsburg, W. Va.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, says the Altoona Tribune, rendered an important decision recently, fixing the limit of the liability of the Pennsylvania Railroad for damages in case of death by an accident at $5,000. Stephen Langdon was killed in a railroad accident near Pittsburg in 1877, and his widow sued the company for $20,000 damages. The Altoona County Court gave her a verdict for $7,712, and the company appealed on the ground that under the act of 1868 there could be no recovery greater than $5,000. The new Constitution provides that there shall be no limit to the amount for injury, but the Pennsylvania Company contended that they had never accepted the provisions of the new Constitution, and therefore are not amenable to any legislation under it. The Supreme Court decided in favor of the claims of the railroad company.

They had a dispute in Wisconsin about a dog. A farmer came into town one day and recognized a fine setter as a dog that had been given to him when a pup and had been stolen. He took it up and put it in his wagon. When the possessor of the dog came rushing up and had him arrested and taken before a magistrate for attempting to steal the dog. The farmer said: "Judge, this is my dog, and I can prove it to you." So he stooped, pinched up the skin of the chest below the foreleg, made a straight incision with a knife, and took out a bright spot, which he showed to the Judge, and which had certain knip-marks on it. "Judge, this knip was given to me three years ago by the T. and Mr. —, the groomer on the street, at the corner, can tell me as to when I got the dog I took him to his store, marked a spot and put it under his skin, first making these crosses with my knife on the lead." He got that dog.

Apr. 19.—Chambers' Journal records a lady's proposal made in a novel manner. The young man, paying his usual evening visit, asked his lady-love how she got along with her cooking. "Nicely," replied she. "I'm improving wonderfully, and make splendid cake, now." "Can you," said the young fellow, ignorantly rushing on to his fate. "What kind do you like best?" "I like one made with four kind sugar, with lots of raisins, currants and citron, and beautifully frosted on top," responded she. "Why, that's a wedding cake!" cried he. "I meant wedding," said she; and there was nothing left for him but to say he meant wedding, too.

Mr. A. Snider, Taylorville, Pa., writes: My mother, an old lady of sixty years, suffered for thirty years with rheumatism, to such an extent that she was at times entirely lame. We procured from Messrs. Lilly & Bros., Druggists in Scranton, Pa., a bottle of Dr. Snider's Ointment, used it according to directions, and saw our efforts crowned with perfect success. Mother was relieved.

The Huntington Journal of last week says: A teacher in one of our public schools the other day told one of her pupils to draw a horizontal line, whereupon he drew a line with the picture of a horse standing upon it. Moral—Speak plain to children.

Are they troublesome—the children? Do their young lives bring us ill, Endless toil and endless worry, Careless strife 'twixt heart and will? 'Tis the plaint, I know, of many In these early modern days, Who, dispensing with the children, Would go on untrammelled ways— Ways of idle, trivial pleasures, Or of missions grandly set; Theories, worked out in action, Rounds of duties bravely met.

Now, we do not pretend to sell our immense stock of FURNITURE, CARPETS, OIL CLOTHS, LOOKING-GLASSES &c., at cost, but do expect to make reasonable profit sufficient to cover expenses of business and make a little money besides; nevertheless, we do claim that an examination of our Goods and Prices will convince the most sceptical that if the profits made in the sale of Furniture in Mifflintown in the past has not been simply ENORMOUS and EXORBITANT, there was at least a wide margin for reduction.

All we ask of the public is to carefully examine our Wares and Prices, and then buy where you can buy to the best advantage.

A. S. WRIGHT & CO., Crystal Palace, Mifflintown, Pa. A MODEL SUBSCRIBER.

"Good morning, Mr. Editor, how are the folks today? I owe you for next year's paper—I thought I'd come and pay; And Jones is again 'to take it, and this is his money here; I shut down lendin' to him, and coax him to try it a year."

"And here's a few little items that happened last week in our town; I thought they'd look good for the paper, so I just jotted 'em down; And here is a basket of peaches my wife picked expressly for you; And a small bunch of flowers from Jennie;—she thought the most send something, too."

"You're doing the politics finely, as all of our family give; Just keep your old goose quill a flappin', and give them a good one for me; And now you are chuck full of business, and I won't be taking your time; I've things of my own I must tend to—good day, sir, I believe I will climb."

The editor sat in his sanctum, and brought down his fist with a thump; "God bless that old farmer," he muttered, "and 'his a regular jolly old tramp." And 'his with our noble profession, and 'his it will ever be still; There are some who appreciate its labor, and some who, perhaps, never will.

But in the great time that is coming, when Gabriel's trumpet shall sound, And they who have labored and rested shall come from the quivering ground; When they who have strived and suffered, and toiled and toiled the race, Shall march at the head of the column, each one in his God-given place. As they march through the gates of the city, 'tis grand and victorious tread The editor and his assistants will travel not far from the head.

(WILL CARLETON.) Is dreamland with thee, my darling, In dreamland so pleasant and sweet, Where all shall be peaceful and joyous, In dreamland, all cloudless, we'll meet.

And our eyes shall forget all their weeping, Our hearts all their throbbing and pain; The lonely love-watch they've been keeping Out in the world's fitful rain.

Earth's thorns will not be for our crowning, Earth's roses will bloom fresh and fair; Where the borrow cloud will have been frowning, The sunlight will fill the sweet air.

In dreamland—our drearied, my darling— The smile of my soul shall be thine, And the smile of thy true soul, my darling, All radiant with love shall be mine.

The summer's most sweet, my darling, Bringing glory to earthy sea and air; But it brings not so lovely an Eden As our beautiful dreamland shall be.

Blest Love is the sweet of our dreamland, And Hope the sweet star of even; And Peace, the clear, gliding river, Flowing to the ocean of heaven.

The heights of our beautiful dreamland Are 'too lofty for language to reach; And the sweet spirit-songs of that region "Never shall float in the speech."

We shall wait not the coming of summer; With its glad, happy leaves for the tree, But, like a long-looked-for comer, I'll wander in dreamland with thee. BERTHIA H. NANCE, in Louisville Courier-Journal.
