High-Toned" Executions in England.

In the course of 140 years only some half a dozen men of social position have been convicted of murder and hanged in England. Chief among these were Lord Ferrers, who is notorious; Mr. Parsons eldest son of a buronet whose baronetcy is extinct; Captain Donellan and Captain Moir. The case of the last, though much the latest, is little known. He was a Scotchman brother in law to Sir James Baird baronet, a near relative of Sir Dayle Baird, who preceded Wellington in the command of the Peninsular army, and first cousin to Sir William Rae, at the date of the fatal occurrence lord advocate of Scotland. He had served seventeen years in the Army, and while at Gibralter nearly died from yellowfever. This affected his brain, and while in Canada he inflicted wounds on himself with a hatchet; in fact, from the date of his illness he was a changed man, and from having been cheerful and amiable, became morose and violent. In 1828 he left the army and took swim by means of a swimming-board. a farm in Essex, and in March, 1830, on discovering a fisherman, whom he had corks are used, they may slip from man's arm, and he ultimately died from of drawning. Excraciating Pain. Edwin Freeman, of Norton, Mass., "I have suffered the most excrementing pass in my lidewe for years and physicians or in my bideaus for yea a and physicians of medicine could not relieve me until about three years since I commenced taking Hunt's Remedy. I jurchosed a bottle at Blanding's drug store in Provience, and I took the irred dose there and after using one bottle I was free from all pain, and sithough this was three years ago. I have seen us trace of disease and have not ball to take any medicine since. I believe Brant's Remedy to be the best Kulner and Liver medicane aver known, and I cheerfully recommended it to all sufferers from this terrible disease. This size, 75 cents.
