The Work of the Mob.

The forged letter against General Garfield on the Chinese question produced its mark wherever Chinamen live in this country. Every drop of blood that has been shed by the mob in its outrages work must be charged to the leaders of the Democracy, for they are the men who have been guilty of inciting the worst elements, against John Chinaman. How would this people take it if Americans in China were subject to the treatment that Chinamen are subject to in America?

Michael Halton, a trackman, was found at the lower end of Altoona on Thursday morning early, lying under a railroad car. He was bleeding from the mouth and had a wound on his forehead. He was taken to the hospital and died there.

A young man named Long, of Northumberland county, but residing near Uniontown, Dauphin county, was placed in jail at Sunbury on Friday for the murder of his father, aged eighty. The old man was found dead on Thursday, with his head battered in. It is said that the crime was committed by his son with a club.

The Post-Enterprise says that a murder is believed to have originated in an order of court compelling the son to support the father, which the son was not inclined to do.

A rural couple in Clinton county were married by a Lock Haven alderman. The groom gave him $3.50 for his services, and was told to come on Monday for his certificate. When he went for the certificate, the alderman said, "Now you give me a dollar and a half more and I'll give you a fine certificate." To all of which the young man roared out: "see yer! What'd ye take me fer? I've paid more'n your fee now, and I've a darn good notion to bring the girl back and have you undo it and get the money again."

The alderman backed out, and said nothing more about a "fine certificate." He said that the groom's motto was "business is business."

On Thursday night of last week the Hamburg Band went to Port Clinton to attend a political meeting. On the return the band's coach, which was drawn by four horses, fell over an embankment to the river shore, twenty feet below. The road was narrow and it was dark, so that the lead horses lost their footing and went down. Their weight and desperate efforts to reach the road again drew the pole horses over and the coach, containing twenty-eight persons, followed. The vehicle turned completely over and was about taking a second somersault when it fortunately came in contact with a tree. The strain was stout enough to bear the strain and the coach with its load of musicians was checked in a moment that no more serious result resulted in the death of some of its occupants. As it was nobody was hurt very badly.

INDIAN FIGHT.

A dispatch from Galveston, Texas, under date of October 28th, says that Col. Terras wrote as follows: "On the 27th inst. the 14th Musketeer Battalion of the United States Cavalry, commanded by Major Terras, had a fight with the Indians. He had fortified himself in the mountains. I surrounded him in the morning and by a simultaneous attack took his position, leaving Victorio and 60 warriors, 18 women and children dead and 68 women and 2 captives prisoners. I have taken also 180 animals. I lost 3 men killed and 12 wounded. Thirty Indians who are at large was in the direction of Bosque Benito. A competent force follows them." General Grierson also telegraphs: "Between 40 and 50 Indians from Mesquero, the Apache agency in New Mexico, were going as far south into Texas as Sierra Diablo, evidently with the intention of assisting or joining Victorio, but were headed off and turned back by troops from Eagle Bluff, near the mouth of the Rio Grande. The troops were pursuing the Indians through the Sacramento Mountains. The cavalry along the Rio Grande are actively scouting and watching for the 30 warriors not killed by Terras."

A Blood-Curdling Episode That Started a Texas Community. From the Waco (Texas) Examiner. A lady residing on Fourth street, and who had been temporarily left at home by her husband, who was away from town on a business trip, was shocked on going into her room an evening or two since to discover that she appeared to be a man stretched prone upon her bed, with the cover drawn close about her. Her first impulse was to flee, screaming from the room, but a second thought came, and with it nerve enough to put the thought into execution. The lady stepped noiselessly into an adjoining room and armed herself with a club. She returned with it and touched the subject of her fright. There was no sign of a man, she had vanquished. She now held her club, but still the object did not move. She now thought the man was sleeping. And a third thought came. Hurrying into another room she procured a bottle of chloroform, saturated a cloth with the drowsy drug, crept back to the bedside and spread the cloth over the sleeping man's face. When it had been there a minute or two she knew her work was accomplished. She now ran out and told her neighbors of what had occurred. Men armed themselves with guns and sticks and marched in solid phalanx to where the interloper lay. The cloth and the bedclothes were carefully removed and the object beneath them was plainly revealed to sight. It proved to be nothing more than a stuffed dummy with a false face upon it. The lady's young son had found it in his mother's room and, fearing she did not know her husband, had put it there. She did not scarce want a cent, however, and her brave conduct had made her the heroine of the neighborhood.

A Woman in Man's Attire. Plays the Part of August Belmont's Nephew for Over a Year. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 30.—This city has a sensation of no small proportions. A young woman was arrested yesterday who has been masquerading here for a year and a half as a young man. The girl, named Miss Parker, is said to be a nephew of August Belmont, of New York, and that she would soon come into possession of a large property. Belmont was a great flirt, making love promiscuously to many young ladies of the city, who regarded him as a good catch. He became engaged to Miss Grace Watts and Miss Brackett, both prominent young ladies. The deal engagement led to trouble, which ended in the arrest of the supposed young man and the discovery of her sex. It is said that Miss Brackett had before expressed doubt of Belmont's masculinity, but was buffeted into silence by her lover. Other and more serious charges will probably be preferred against the young lady, whose real name is not known. She is supposed to have stolen various sums of money in Watts' house, where she boarded, and never paid a board bill for more than a year.

The Bryson Murders. Three of Them Receive a Very Light Sentence. Herbert Gould, Joseph Beltz and John Martin, three of the railroad trackmen convicted of involuntary manslaughter because of their connection with the drowning of Robert Bryson (the bunch of grapes murder) at Agnew Station, was called up for sentence yesterday before Judge Kirkpatrick, at Pittsburg. The jury had recommended them to the extreme mercy of the court. The judge stated that he considered them technically guilty of the crime, and that a delegation of some of the best citizens in the neighborhood of Agnew Station had called upon him and testified to the prisoners' uniform good reputation for peace. He then imposed upon each a sentence to undergo a term of three months' imprisonment in the county jail. Luster, another of the prisoners, will be sentenced probably next week, in case the court should over-rule a motion for a new trial, which is pending. The case is stronger against him than against the others, and the jury did not recommend him to the extreme mercy of the court. —Harrisburg Telegraph Oct. 28th.

Killed a Bear with a Blivet of Wood. From the Brunswick (Ga.) Advertiser. The Altamaha swamp abounds in bears. Although not hunted as regularly as deer, many are nevertheless killed every year. A colored man had an encounter with one of these warnings ago that is worth narrating. The negro was crossing over to Butler's Island in the boat just at daylight. Mrs. Braun, too, had concluded to pass over and was swimming for dear life when the negro, observing her, paddled his boat alongside of her, and with a blivet of wood quickly dispatched her. She was full grown, and would have given fight had they met on terra firma instead of in the water, where she was, had any advantage.

AN ATROCIOUS CRIME.

A School Boy Kidnapped and Killed. Old books give accounts of how children stealing was carried on in past days. In modern times there has not been much of it done. The notable case in America is that of Charlie Ross, the shocking case of child stealing and murder was dispatched from London, England, on the 12th inst. The dispatch was sent to the New York Evening Telegram, and reads: LONDON, Oct. 12.—The particulars of a most atrocious crime, committed a short time ago, are published in the English papers this morning. It has an especial interest for those who have made the Charley Ross case a study, as the confession of murder, made a few days ago, shows that in this, as in the American case, the object of the criminals was to obtain a large amount of money as a ransom.

William Marianne de Jough, clerk to the Minister of the Colonies at the Hague, confessed to murdering a school boy named Marinus Bogardt, a son of a former Secretary General, now living a retired life. The murderer laid his plans very cunningly, and before securing the boy had written a letter to the father asking for 75,000 guilders, or $30,000, for the surrender of his son, but how and where the ransom was to be paid was not clear. It is supposed De Jough had made up his mind to this.

The confusion of how the murder was committed was told by the prisoner to his sister, to whom he was devotedly attached. De Jough went bitterly while giving the following account of the motives and circumstances under which the murder took place: He said that on September 23, before he committed the crime and before he had even possession of the boy, he wrote the letter referred to, demanding the ransom on a certain date. The letter was written in the Cafe St. Hubert, from which he went to Ziegler's Park, where Mr. Bogardt resided. It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and Bogardt had just left her house and driven in her carriage to Schevingen. De Jough thereupon went to the Rhine Railway station, and, having directed a letter, put it into the post office letter box at the station. As then took a cab, but as the cabman was asleep when De Jough entered the vehicle he did not notice his face. De Jough drove to the school and asked for young Marins Bogardt, a ten-year-old boy thirteen years of age.

"Do you know me?" he asked of the boy. "No," replied the latter, "I have often met you in the park." "Now, my boy, your mamma asked me to fetch you from school," said De Jough. "Did she not, then, go to Schevingen?" inquired the lad.

"Yes," replied De Jough, seeing that the boy knew his mother's intention; "but she told me she would on her return wait for us at a peasant's house on the downs near the town." The boy then fetched his articles, asked permission to leave school and accompanied De Jough in a cab.

When they arrived on the downs the father sought a quiet place, where he threw the boy on the ground, bound his hands and feet with cord, which he had bought that morning. "Remain here," he said to Marins. "I'll return with the money I have demanded from your father. Stop your crying if you do not want to be killed." He covered the youth with his coat and intended to go, but the boy cried so loudly that he returned. Vancing he heard footsteps. De Jough took his sword out of his walking-stick and killed the child, stabbing him seven times in the breast. In a very quiet state of mind the ruffian fled to Schevingen, washed his hands at the sea shore, and returned to the Hague, after having thrown away his sword-stick in a little channel by the roadside. De Jough was arrested on the downs, whether he returned early the following morning, but after being confronted with the coachman and other witnesses he was liberated. He was arrested afterwards on his own confession.

After his avowal of his crime his sister asked him what motive he had for the horrible deed. He answered: "I saw our father die in poverty. As for myself, I could not make my way in India, but I had a place in the same office where father worked, with no better prospect than he had. What would be my mother's lot and yours? I wished to assure to her a comfortable old age, and when I heard from a family who are acquainted with his circumstances that Mr. Bogardt was very rich, and that I was offered with a desire to constrain him to give me money by stealing away his only son, I did not intend to kill the child, except in case he should possibly become my accuser. My only motive was my wish for money. Nobody assisted me either before or at the murder."

The accused maintains he is the sole delinquent. He will appear at the end of this month before the Criminal Court.

Sixty Miles a Minute on a Tin Pan. From the Pittsburg Telegraph. Arthur Fitzpatrick, who returned from Colorado a short time ago, gives the following glowing account of an occurrence in the mining districts, of which he was an eye witness. "A miner and some companions were crossing the Continental Divide, and as I was covered with snow. Three miles below them, a decline of 45 degrees, deeply covered with frozen snow, lay the spot they desired to reach, while to go round by trail was 15 miles. The miner took a tin pan, used for washing gold, spread his blanket over it, got in himself in a squatting position on his haunches, tucked the blanket around, held his rifle and other traps over his head and got one of his companions to give him a push. He states that he went down at the speed of sixty miles an hour, and shot out into the valley at the foot of the mountain. When he stopped he found the soldering of the pan melted from friction, his blanket on fire, and it was his impression that he had gone much further, but he would have been burned up, together with all his traps."

They procured the assistance of five other gentlemen, and proceeding to the store room, surrounded it. The man who was on the watch saw them and attempted to escape by running. He was shot in the back and arm, receiving desperate wounds, from the effects of which he died. The other and younger man was captured by Hon. A. Barker and gave the name of Albert Wilson. Both men are strangers to Ebensburg, and refuse to gratify public curiosity concerning their past history. They had in their possession a complete set of burglar's tools and are evidently old criminals.
