to give to any one else. Old maids are nice looking, and "young for their years." Old h have red noses, rheumatism in the knees, hald heads and mouths that turn down at the corners. Old maids can make a home of one little room, and they cook delicious meals for one over the gas jet, in cunning little tin kettles, besides making all their own ward. robes. Old bachelors need an army of tailors, waiters, cooks and distant relatives to keep them comfortable. When old maids are ill they tie up their heads in pocket handkerchiefs, take homepathic pellets out of two bottles alternately. and get well again. When old bachelors are ill they go to bed and send for four doctors; have a consultation, a mantle-piece full of black bottles, all the amiable amiable married men who belong to the club to sit up with them at night, besides a hired nurse; they telegraph to their relations, and do their best to persuade the world that they are dying. When an old maid travels she takes a sandwich, a piece of pound cake and a bottle of lemonade in a basket, and lunches comfortably in the carriage. When an old bachelor travels he orders a meal in courses at the station, and raves because he has no time to eat it before the "fifteen minutes for refreshments" has expired. Old maids drink weak tea, and it cures their hendaches. Old bachelors drink strong liquor, and t gives them headaches. Old maids are modest. They think their youth is over and their beauty gone. If after a while some autumnal love is given hem they take it as a sort of a miracle, and hope people will not laugh at them for 'marrying so late in life." The Dignity of the Law.
