WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 27, 1880. The quiet of the Capital was rippled by the arrival of General Garfield and Mrs. Garfield on last Tuesday. The first person who greeted the President-elect was Colonel Robert Ingersoll. Bob, as everybody knows, is not considered orthodox, and the trate of the Republic and the Pagan led to vigor. the remark that perhaps the new administration would be organized upon the basis of the old Roman Republic, which tolerated all and every kind of religion, and if it had not been for that principle in the government of Reme, Christianity would never have passed outside of the limits of the Jewish nation. The execution of Christ was pany him. intended to crush out his system of religion, but the liberality of the Roman government on the question of religion allowed the escaped spostles to preach anywhere and everywhere within the limits of the Roman empire. But if any one supposed that the General has made a truce with the Pagan phase of Ingersoll it is a mistake, for the Campbellites, for whom Garfield has preached, propose to build a church here, so that the President may worship among his own people on the Sab bath day. People always go to extremes, and now some are saying that instead of Paganism, instead of a state or nation with no recognized religion, we are to have fire. a state religion. How the Old Lady Knew That Garfield Would be Elected

In Greensburg, Westmoreland coun ty, Pa., there resides an old lady named Mary Paulding, who for the past twenty years has on the morning of the election, in a novel way put to a test who would be elected President of the United States, which test, she avers, in all that time has pever failed her. This; is how she does it : On the evening before the day of election she selects two roosters and names them for the two leading candidates, puts them under a tub-or for that part under a copper kettle-in the back yard, and in the she raises the tub and lets them strut so vote, when the people would get a vote er on, "See, he has the biggest tail, yet er's lap. says she never was deceived.
