SPECULATION
In Insurance in Juniata County.

On Saturday, a number of citizens assembled to meet on the pavement, and their conversation turned on Life Insurance. One of the citizens was doing the talking, and he was doing it very effectively. "It is a certain fact that a life insurance company has been organized here in this town, and it takes as many other places, and will not be long till the business will be spread not in our midst. Why it is only a few days ago, that I met two men who said that a neighbor told me that a lady friend of his wanted him to help her to get an insurance on the life of her mother, but my neighbor, either was too conscientious or he was afraid I do not now propose to say whether it was or not, but it seems that he was helping him from his wife's friend to an insurance, but if there had been an agent here to advise him, he would not have been applied to. In adjoining counties it is a most profitable business for directors and agents, though the report is that the company has a large surplus, that is reliable report, says, that the proportion of the divide between the directors and agents, of the proceeds on every one insured, or the division of the initiation, or policy fee is three-fifths for the directors and two-fifths for the agents. By way of illustration, it is said the old company, it is said the old company, the agent gets forty dollars of the sum, and the directors get sixty dollars of the sum.

The whole list of old people in Mifflintown was talked over. This aged people, and that aged woman has been subject to a searching examination in the mind of the speculator, as to their fitness as subjects who are not likely to live so long as to be very expensive as subjects.

The real intelligent speculator declares that the civilization of the 19th century is a grand civilization compared with the manner of treatment of old people in the historic past. In the past some of the tribes of people that a man and a woman reached a certain age they killed them. There was no uncertainty among such people as to when a man and woman should go away into the spirit land. This age of the person fixed the period of expiring. In those days they wanted the old people to forget them. In those days they want to make use of old people to secure money, money, money.

It is argued that men and women must die, such is the common lot, and any one will take speculators risk in life insurance, on the aged and infirm, it will help the financial straits of the speculator, and that the aged people will do just that much more good in their old days. "That is the one side of the question, and the other is, to the peace of mind of such as are insured, is found in the reflection, that such cases as that now in the Northwestern county court, where a young man is on trial, on the charge of having murdered his father to obtain the money for which the father's life was insured. A week from this, Saturday, the result of the trial doubtless will be known."

"There are three agents at work in the vicinity of Richfield and the business is booming out there. An agent has been to see the directors of a company for which he is operating, and he told that it makes no difference if the subject dies the next hour after insurance, the money must be paid. I have not heard of them holding a subject up in bed to get their signature. I don't know how some of the speculators look at the assessments. If some of the subjects fail to die soon, somebody will lose by failure to pay assessments levied."

"There must be nearly, or quite a half million of insurance on old people who live within a circle of not many miles to Richfield." "Let me see, there is old Mr. Hendricks, aged about 70 years, he is insured for $135,000. Mrs. Siders, about the same age insured for $130,000, Mr. McConnell aged, insured for $30,000. Old Mrs. Keller insured for $100,000. Mrs. Ketter aged about 80, insured for $20,000. Old Mr. Keller insured for $20,000, which swells the sum up to between four and five hundred thousand dollars. Recently a Mrs. Cleck died. She was largely insured. I could mention others, but the list is large enough for this time. Perhaps the next time we meet and talk about life insurance the list can be run up to a million."

One of the pulp boilers in the paper mill at Downing Spring, Blair county, where the President's fire-Nic was held last autumn, exploded several days ago. The Altoona Tribune says of the explosion: The boiler was worn to the height of several hundred feet and nearly demolished a dwelling at the foot where it fell. David McKee was badly hurt and scalped, and died in about six hours after the explosion. The loss may be $10,000 or $12,000, partly covered by insurance. The mill had just undergone repairs, and the boilers were pronounced by the persons who repaired them to be in excellent condition. This boiler had just been filled with wood for the first time after the repairs, and steam applied to it about two hours previous to the explosion. There were only about sixty pounds of steam applied. These boilers were tested to one hundred and fifty pounds, and considered perfectly safe at one hundred pounds pressure. Mr. McKee, the person who was injured by the explosion, had just charged the pulp boiler and applied the steam to it, and was watching it with great care when the explosion occurred. He was so badly hurt that he could not get up. He was so badly hurt that he could not get up. He was so badly hurt that he could not get up. He was so badly hurt that he could not get up.

Court Proceedings.

We went to press last week with the case of J. R. Menninger and Miss Belle Kennedy pending before the court. Verdict, not guilty. County by cost of prosecution.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Aaron Donaldson on a charge of attempted murder, the verdict was not guilty, and that the costs are to be divided between the parties, equally. Donaldson paid his share of the costs, but Martha Donaldson, the child who brought the prosecution, was sent to jail in default of the payment of her share of the costs.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. William Kelly, alias Keller—indictment, assault with battery, Charles Falm, prosecutor—the verdict was guilty in manner and form as indicted.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. L. W. Hamilton, the verdict was guilty of assault and battery, and defendant to pay costs of prosecution.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. William Nankivell, Jr.—indictment, forcible entry—the verdict was, not guilty; the prosecutor to pay costs of prosecution.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. John C. Moser—indictment, selling liquor on Sunday. James G. Kreider, prosecutor—the grand jury ignored the bill.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. John C. Moser—indictment, selling liquor in quantities less than one quart without license, James G. Kreider, prosecutor—the grand jury found a true bill. Meanwhile the prosecutor, James G. Kreider, was seized upon by a United States Court officer and taken to Sunbury on a charge of having sold liquor in violation of United States law; but before the case came before the court for trial Kreider came back and the prosecutions, one against the other, were settled.

The land case of J. M. Blair, J. Morrison and Jason L. Robinson vs. Samuel Shoemaker and William Gosborn, resulted in a verdict for plaintiff.

Eleven cases were disposed of for the December term by settlement, ruling out, or continuance.

The tree nursery case of D. R. P. Bealor, surviving partner of John M. Kepner, deceased, vs. George Gibson and Philip M. Kepner, consumed the balance of the week, and was continued to Monday of this week, when its trial was resumed. Bealor and Kepner were partners in a tree and vine nursery on the land of Kepner. When Kepner died the title of the lease for the occupancy of the land had not expired. Bealor was forbidden by the heirs to give attention to the nursery. Suit is brought to recover damages that the trees sustained, while the nursery was in a neglected state, and for trees sold by the heirs of Kepner. The jury returned with the case on Tuesday at 9 1/2 A. M. The jury was not long out, and when it came in, the verdict was in favor of Bealor in the sum of $1,575.00.

The last case reserved for the present session—that of Bonavitz and wife vs. J. M. Morrison—was taken up when the jury returned with the nursery case. The trouble is in regard to a promissory note of $3,200.00, which Morrison gave to Mrs. Bonavitz as her interest in 480 acres of Mississippi land, which belonged to the Kirk estate. Payment of the note is disputed on the ground of belief based upon certain acts, that a job was engaged in to dispose of the said interest to Morrison at an inflated price.

The court confirmed the appointment of the real estate of Daniel Stouffer, deceased, and granted a receipt on the heirs of said decedent to accept, or refuse to accept the real estate at the valuation put upon it by the appraisers.

Report of E. D. Parker, as Auditor in final account of Ezra Smith, Administrator of Elizabeth Fry, deceased.

Return of sale of real estate of William Nelson, by T. M. Uley, Administrator. Confirmed.

Petition of J. C. Crawford, one of the Administrators of S. B. Crawford, dec'd, for an order to sell real estate. Granted.

The time of the rule granted upon the heirs of William Reed and all parties interested in the estate of said William Reed, was continued indefinitely.

John S. Sieber was appointed Guardian of Garrie Burkholder and Annie I. Burkholder.

Jacob B. Smith was appointed Guardian of Mary Alice Smith, Laura J. Smith, Anna E. Smith, Elmer E. Smith and Ida M. Smith.
