THE Washington weather bureau surprises the country by telling it that the three storms of the present winter came from the Gulf of Mexico.

THE cold weather set dreadfully hard on the 50,000 people who are out of employment in the District of Columbia.

WE are in receipt of Governor Hoyt's message to the Legislature, but it came at such a late hour that nothing more than a brief mention of its contents can be made in this issue.

THE Legislature convened on the 4th inst. B. L. Hewitt was elected Speaker of the House, Harry H. Clark, Chief Clerk, and J. D. Patterson, Resident Clerk.

MURDER AT BETHLEHEM, PA.

A Man Murders the Man and Woman that He Boarded With, and Makes an Effort to Outrage a Fifteen-Year Old Daughter of the People He Murdered.

HIS ARREST IN A BARN.

HE CONFESSES THE CRIME AND IS LYNCHED.

A dreadful tragedy was enacted about four miles from the town of Bethlehem, in this State, on Sunday night, December 26, 1880, and on the following Monday, December 27th.

THE whole dreadful affair is quite fully presented in the following dispatch from McClure's Philadelphia Times of December 28, 1880:

BETHLEHEM, Dec. 27.—Not only the quiet borough of Bethlehem and the adjacent country, but the whole of Northampton county, was shocked this morning by the discovery of the murder of a man and woman, who had been murdered while asleep in their beds, at their home on Monocacy creek, about three miles north of here.

THE news spread rapidly and when Detective W. W. Yohie, of the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad Company, reached the house of the Geogles he found a crowd of men, women and children around it.

THE yard and road and lane on the south side of the house were filled with knots of people to the number of several hundred, and although there was no boisterousness, it was evident that they were dreadfully in earnest and that it would not be long before the murderer would be found.

THE neighbors, after the first horror had worn off, began to look on Snyder with suspicion. He escaped the notice of the crowd and went into the barn. About six o'clock it was discovered that Snyder had gone through the barn, crossed a stable field and after clambering a hill had reached the public road.

THE young girls, at the earnest solicitation of Alice and Mary Geogle, decided to stay all night with their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Geogle retired to a small bedroom on the first floor opening off from the kitchen and also communicating with the sitting-room.

the law, mustered up his courage, and, carrying a candle in his hand, and followed by the rest, all with white faces and noiseless steps, entered the room.

THE scene that met their sight froze their blood and paralyzed their limbs and tongues, all but Snyder, who was cool enough. He said "It is too bad," and pointing to a window, added, "There is where the men jumped out. I had a hard fight with them. There were four men altogether." The men stood about speechless. The bed on which the murdered man and woman lay was a mass of gore and brains.

between the rope and Snyder's neck, and in the name of the law ordered the men to give him possession of the prisoner. At this moment an excited crowd rushed his way through the crowd, and confronting Snyder and the officer said, as he removed his coat: "I have come to kill you, Snyder. The stranger is a brother of the murdered man and had just arrived on the ground. The crowd yelled, "That's right; go in and kill him." The determined officer covered the stranger with his revolver, but turned and said:

"Snyder, I am afraid I can't protect you from them much longer." "They do not like you because you are a stranger," replied Snyder. "Have you anything to say?" asked the officer. "Yes; I will tell you that I am not afraid to die. I desire to see what I have done. The man and me had words some time ago, and I said I would kill him, and I always keep my word. I killed him, and I would do the same thing over. I want to talk to you a minute, and all I ask those devils is to wait till I get through."

WHILE this conversation was going on John Mack, a shoemaker, of Bethlehem, mounted a pile of cord-wood, and then clambered up the tree and passed the rope over the limb. The crowd gave a shout, and Snyder, on seeing the cause of it, smiled grimly, and said "Good-bye" to the detective. Detective Yohie resolved to make one last view of Snyder's life, and running to the rope wrapped a turn or two of the sack over the doomed man's head around his own arm. At that instant half a dozen willing hands seized the rope and the detective was jerked from his feet and Snyder's body rose in the air and swung ten feet above the ground.

THE people looked on un pityingly for about five minutes, when those who held the rope grew tired and, letting go of it, Snyder's body struck the church with a sickening thud. This sent a shudder through the crowd, but the rope was soon passed over the limb again and the unconscious man, with his face bruised and covered with dirt and snow, was once more pulled up. Some one made a half-tie of the sack end around the tree, and, after hanging for three-quarters of an hour and dying from strangulation, Snyder's body was cut down.

CORONER Usher held an inquest on the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Geogle, which, from the nature of the case, was a mere formality. Mr. and Mrs. Geogle were both very exemplary in their lives and stood well with their neighbors. They were industrious and self-respecting. The children were removed to the house of a relative. Snyder's body was taken to the county post-house.

THE Poor Land of Kansas. From the Chicago Tribune.

There are fertile lands in Kansas—thousands of acres of them—but they are in the eastern part of the State, and were taken up long ago. West of the ninety-ninth meridian the rainfall is generally insufficient to insure regular crops. A man may raise a crop there once in two or three years, and he may not raise one in five years. In the western counties the land is practically worthless. Sage-brush grows on it sparsely in the fall and spring, and dries up again in summer. One-half of the State, it may be said, is good farm land, and the other half is worthless.

The latest subject of artificial culture is that of frogs, for domestic provision markets. The demand for the frog is not adequately appreciated in America, perhaps because no sufficient attention has hitherto been given to the subject. But now that they are raised and fattened for market in considerable numbers, there is no good reason why they should not be at least as popular as crabs, catfish or lobsters. The flesh of the frog is quite as pleasant to the taste as that of spring chicken.

Chief Victoria is undoubtedly dead, as his wife has gone into mourning for him, which includes cutting off her hair, which she would not be likely to do until she was certain her husband was no more.

Some progressive individuals have been trying to introduce an organ in the Presbyterian Church at Toronto, Canada, but the brethren would not have such an abomination. At last the session voted to allow a little cabinet organ in the basement for the choir and singing school to practice on. The opposition party influenced the sexton, and he shut the door in the face of the men who brought the organ to the church by a back door. They met to sing that evening. The pastor made a little speech in favor of using the organ, and the choir began to practise a hymn on it for next Sunday. Just then a committee of anti-organists, headed by a trustee, came in and tried to carry the organ away. The young men of the choir fought recklessly to keep them back, but the old men were too many for them, and pitched the "awful abomination" into the street.

Four young men have just been arrested at Pottstown, Pa., for robbery and arson committed nearly five years ago in Chester county. Detectives have been working on the case ever since.
