Not many French cards were ever sold in the American markets, comparatively speaking, aithough these manufactures were exceedingly fine-aline card, thin, strong, and delicate, and nice to handle. The great bulk of imported cards were from English manufactures, as they are to-day. The English cards excel in their beauty of finish, geometrical designs for their backs being ornsmented with fine colors and gliding to an extent never attempted with the American article.

This elegance of ornamentation seems to have always been a specialty with the English makers, and alone, or in connection with the heavy duties, appears to warrant the price asked for them—about double that of American article.

But, as has been intend, of late years great progress has been made in the manufacture of playing cards in this country, until at orseent no better. manufacture of pisying cards in this country, until at present no better goods can be found in any market than are afforded by United States makers. The English manufacturers have been trying to copy the results attained in American copy the results attained in American round-cornered cards by "dieing out" the stock; but is this effort they failed signally, since the card cannot be cut in that way without fatally inturing in that way without fatally injuring for meat is, therefore, better than for its edges and quality. THE HOUSEHOLD.

Besides the improvement in the shape of cards above described, there have been other innovations in American and manufactore, which have also been ineffectually imitated abroad. There are now in the market "triplicate" and "indicator" playing cards, both designed to shorten the process of reading a "hand," and as a guard against the confederate system in some kinds of gambling games. Thus the friplicate card has a ministure of the face of the card-reproduced in its upper left hand certer, as, for instance, the five-spot of clubs in the corner indicated, the five-spot of clubs has a miniature five of clubs in the corner indicated, the size of the latter being only about half an inch the longest way. But a still better device for the purpose is found in the "indicator" card. In this case, instead of the miniature, less the control of the miniatur there appears, in the same corner, a figure immediately over a copy of the

Never place the belt on a pully in

Never place the belt on a pully in motion; always place it on the loose pully or the pully at rest; then run it on the pully in motion. If the belt is very heavy, and the pulleys run at a very high rate of speed, it is advisable to slack on the speed of the engine; but when this is impracticable or inconvenient, care must be taken to mount the belt on the exact face. The person engaged in se doing must have a firm footing and prevent his clothes from getting in contact either with the belt or pully. Where the belt is heavy and the location such that it is impossible to get a solid footing and exert strength in running on the belt, it is best to stop the engine and mount the belt on the pully as far as possible. Then take a small rope, double it, allp one end through the arms and around the belt and rim of the pully, and the other end through the loop formed by the double of the rope; then stand on the floor on the opposite side and draw on the rope, when the belt will be hugged to the and the large number of testimenials which are constantly being reserved from per ons who have been cured by its use, are conclusive proof its great value. "Vegerine," says a Boston physician, "has no equal as a blood purifier. Hearing of its many wonderful cures, after all other remedies had failed, I visited the laboratory and convinced myself of its genuine merit. It is pre-pared from barks, roots, and herbs, each of which is highly effective, and they are compounded in such a manner as to produce astonishing results."

Another improvement in barrel hoop consists of forming them of wire bent into corrugations, so that the shape is serpentine; a hoop of this kind, when driven upon a dry barrel or tub, compressing and holding the staves tightly together, like the ordinary stave hoop, having also elasticity or spring enough to stretch when the staves expand by moisture, returning to its former posi-tion, when they again become dry and skrink. In this way the hoops adap themselves to the expansion and contraction of the barrel, so that the trouble of loose or bursting hoops is avoided, By forming the corrugations to rest flatwise against the stares no obstruction is offered to the rolling of barrels, while a much greater amount of friction surface is brought to bear upon the staves, increasing the ing power. This seems to be the latest form of improvement resulting from the many experiments made in this direction.
