DON'T TAKE IT TO HEART.

There's many a trouble and into the waters of Lethe depart And tenderly nurse it,

There's many a sorrow Would vanish to-morrow, Were we not unwilling to furnish the wings So sadly intruding, And quietly brooding, It hatches out all sorts of horrible things.

How welcome the seeming of looks that are beaming, Whether one's wealthy or whether one's poor. Cheeks red as a cherry,

Resolved to be merry, All worry to ferry
Across the famed waters that bid us forget; And he longer tearful, But happy and cheerful life has much that's worth living for yet.

THE MAJOR'S GHOST.

It was the twelfth annual dinner of the club, and the colonel, the major, the captain and myself were seated around a table loaded with wine and fruit. We were the remainder of our club, which originally contained all the officers of our regiment who had survived the war. At first there were fifteen of us, but the hardships and wounds of these four bitter years had taken the others away. Every year there was one plate less, and we began to look on our final dissolution. But we four who had met the previous year, gladly drained a glass to the discomfort of the broken spell.

It had not been our fate to have the comfortable and at ease. I found that, fame of victory without toil, for ours had been a fighting regiment. Dangers held a friend; and glad was I to know shared together had strengthened the bond of friendship, and these yearly

Italian Poison Antidote

M. Bellini, of Florence, advocates the use of iodide of starch as an antidote for poisons in general, and, as it has no disagreeable taste and is free from the irritant properties of iodine, it can be administered in large doses; also, without fear in all cases when the poison is unknown. It will be found very efficacions
