Governor Hoyt's Thanksgiving Proclamation.
In his name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Henry M. Hoyt, Governor of said Commonwealth,
A PROCLAMATION:
During a season of drought and partial failure of the harvests, which in a less fruitful land would have brought famine and distress, and in a time of public trial and tribulation, which under less happy institutions might have led to dissension and strife, the people of the United States, and particularly of Pennsylvania, have been preserved in health, in estate and in peace.
Now, therefore, I, Henry M. Hoyt, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do ordain and set apart Thursday, November 25th, A. D. 1881 (being the same day appointed by the President of the United States), for the observance of those religious services, recognizing the beneficence and care of the Father of us all, and those household customs, strengthening the bonds of families and a common brotherhood, in which the time-honored traditions of the Commonwealth have embodied the thanksgiving and prayers of a grateful people.
Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at Harrisburg, this tenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the Commonwealth the one hundred and sixth.
HENRY M. HOYT,
Governor.
By the Secretary:
M. S. QUAY,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Tat Philadelphia North American of the 16th inst., says that "pink eyes," a horse disease, is spoken of by Dr. John W. Gadsden, veterinary surgeon, as follows: "Pink eyes" is a simple disease, though it needs proper treatment. It is not unlike a cold accompanied with fever, although the types vary. The main danger is that the influenza sometimes takes the animal with other debilitating diseases, and last fall it led swelling of the head, technically known as purpura hemorrhagica, when the watery part of the blood gets under the coating of the skin. The doctor believes that the influenza is neither infectious nor contagious, but it is owing to the condition of the atmosphere. The symptoms are coughing, and a yellowish discharge, in extreme cases, from the animal's nostrils. The way the disease recovers its name is that at the first stage of the trouble the mucus membrane under the eyelids becomes a bright pink color, but as the horse grows worse it turns yellow. This was the disease which was heralded enough to be called of an epidemic character, and a few days of cold, clear weather would do much to drive it away entirely. When a horse is attacked the animal should not be worked, but allowed to rest for a few days, when no danger need be anticipated. He says that the disease is a debilitating one, and that it is a great mistake to doctor the animal more than the disease itself. The animals are frequently given linseed oil, scotch, belladonna and aloe, which compound prostrates the unfortunate animal more than the disease itself. The affected animals require a treatment that will build them up rather than pull them down.

On Saturday a week Mr. John S. McClintock, of Carroll township, Perry county, got a blast in an old well on the farm of Joseph Messer, in Silver Spring township, Cumberland county, near Bucher's Mill. On Monday morning he went down into the well to remove the rock dislodged by the blast on Saturday. He had lit a candle when down to drive out the gas. When one of the large stones was being hoisted out he seated himself on the stone, but when near the top of the well he left go the rope and fell back down about forty feet to the bottom of the well, no doubt being overcome by the gas. He was cut about nine inches from the top of his head near the forehead running to the back part and also another going out across the top of the head in an opposite direction. He lived until Wednesday when he was brought to his late residence in Carroll township Tuesday. He was an old well digger, but owned a small farm a short distance northwest of Carson Lackey's farm. He leaves a wife and family.—Perry County Advocate.

"We in Lucifer?" said the teacher to the infant class in Sunday-school. "I know," spoke up a brave five-year-old girl in a very earnest tone. "Well, tell me, Katie," said the teacher. "Why, Lucy's fer Bob Spriggs, who has such a funny little mustache, an' wears such a short hat; but papa don't like him at all, an' he's fer hisn' gy to sense an' no money, an' he's fer zat of Mr. Grip, an'—" "That will do, Katie," broke in the teacher; "I see you are posted. We'll go on to another question," and it required the teacher five minutes to get through with her hankering winging her eyes, who "has such a neat cold, you know," for Lucy was instructing another class near by. Lucy told her mother afterward that she thought Katie too young to go to Sunday-school; the contention was not good for her.—Wis and Wisdom.

Mr. Jacob REED, of this place, has been experimenting to some extent in order to ascertain the best way of getting rid of Canada distillates that grow on his farm. He has used salt, coal oil, and a number of other remedies, but with no success. Some time ago he took it into his head to try apple pomace through the color press, knowing by experience that it would kill grass and other weeds. The application was duly made and the result was entirely satisfactory. By cutting off the stalk of this objectionable weed, and placing a common shovel full of pomace over the roots they are sure to die, and the following season you will find no trace of the weed. Mr. Reed has repeatedly tried this remedy, and every effort has been attended with entire success. It is upon his authority that we give it to the public, that it may benefit many who are bothered with the Canada thistle.—Jersey Shore Herald.

Not long ago a young man in Carson got married and started for California with his young wife. His father bade him good-bye and gave him the parental blessing. "My son," said the good sire, shaking with emotion, "remember these words if you never see me again: Never go into a place where you would not take me with you." Last week the father went down to visit them. He proposed a bear hunt, and they were fortunate enough in tracking a grizzly to his lair among some of the bowlders in the chaparral. As the two approached, the bear roared up and sent forth a glow of defiance which shook the trees. "Go in there and kill him," said the father excitedly. "Count me out," said the son. "I have I crossed the seas and settled in America to raise a coward!" shouted the father, brandishing his gun. "I recollect your advice when I left Carson," was the reply. "Didn't you tell me never to go where I couldn't take my wife? Now, how'd she look in there with that bear?" The father charged his dutiful son to his bosom, and as the bear issued forth exclaimed: "Speaking of Sally, let us hasten home; our prolonged absence might cause her needless alarm." In about fifteen minutes they had reached the ranch, the father a little ahead, and the distance was about four miles.

MANHOOD
How Lost, How Restored.
Just published, a new edition of DR. The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
