

B. F. SCHWEIER,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

CONGRESS CONVENES NEXT MONDAY.
The Greenback trial progresses at Washington, with no new developments.

The Greenbackers polled 14,976 votes in this State at the late election, and the Temperance people 4,507 votes.

Three hundred railroad men at work on a passenger track, in Philadelphia, last Sunday, were confronted by 60 policemen and ordered to stop work. They stopped work.

There is an exhibition of the products of the South now open at Atlanta, Georgia. On Thursday 20,000 people visited the exhibition. The exhibition will remain open till the end of December.

It is said that the foreign men, and the citizens of this government, that own Confederate bonds, will urge upon Congress, and the States to change the amendment to the Constitution so that the bonds may be paid.

The Reading school board forbade its teachers from attending the teachers' institute. The late Legislature passed a law, enjoining school boards to grant teachers time and pay during their attendance upon the sessions of a teachers' institute. To defy the law is not the proper remedy; the remedy is to seek to have the Legislature repeal the law.

The Guiteau trial progresses at Washington. There seems to be little doubt in the Court and the little crowd laugh and jest as when in attendance upon a circus. A great many witnesses, have been called to testify to the sanity or insanity of the murderer. His brother John Guiteau says that he believes him to be morally responsible, but possessed of a devil.

URIAH MOYER, one of the murderers of Kintzler and wife in Snyder county has been brought from near Schoolcraft Michigan, and put in the Middleburg jail. "Gov. Hoyt has granted a reprieve to Israel Erb and Jonathan Moyer, two of the Kintzler murderers, sentenced to be hanged in Snyder county on December 16th, in order that their cases may come up at the next meeting of the Board of Pardons. No time for their execution is mentioned in the reprieve, and if the boards act adversely on the petition of the condemned men the day will have to be reset."

The Supreme Court has divided the State into three districts for Supreme Court business, as follows:—The Western district is composed of Allegheny, Beaver, Greene, Jefferson, Venango, Westmoreland and Washington; the Middle district, of Adams, Dauphin and Franklin; the Eastern district, of Armstrong, Berks, Berks, Cambria, Clarion, Crawford, Carbon, Chester, Cumberland, Centre, Columbia, Clinton, Clinton, Cameron, Clearfield, Delaware, Erie, Elk, Fayette, Forest, Fulton, Huntingdon, Indiana, Juniata, Lawrence, Lehigh, Lebanon, Luzerne, Lackawanna, Lycoming, Lancaster, McKean, Mercer, Mifflin, Monroe, Montgomery, Montour, Northumberland, Northampton, Philadelphia, Perry, Potter, Pike, Schuylkill, Somerset, Susquehanna, Snyder, Sullivan, Tioga, Union, Wyoming, Wayne, Warren and York.

The terms of the court in the districts are fixed as follows: That of the Western district commences on the first Monday of October and continues four weeks; that of the Middle district commences on the twenty-first Monday following the first Monday of January and continues one week, and the Eastern district term commences on the third Monday of November, and continues until the commencement of the term in the Middle district.

One of the talented lady writers of the country is Gail Hamilton, sister-in-law of James G. Blaine. The Detroit Free Press, for some reason, does not like Mr. Blaine and Gail Hamilton; but they, being out of reach of any damaging truthful charges, the editor of that paper exhibits his poor judgment and bad heart by resort to blackguardism, believing thereby to say something that will attract attention and pass for ability, and at the same time detract from the merit of Mr. Blaine and Gail Hamilton, and therefore an article is produced and entitled "Pools and Damphool," but as blackguards have little ability they cannot fail of blundering, and so the man of the Detroit Free Press must needs blunder and write his own condemnation. In its article as above named Blaine and Gail Hamilton are not introduced till about the close of the production, and then almost in the same sentence that introduces them the writer cuts himself up by the roots, when he distinctly attempts to classify the fool and the damphool. The certain sign, he says, of their classification is in their waste and loss of property. How correct his rule is it is not our purpose to consider; but let us see how it applies to Secretary Blaine and Gail Hamilton. Have they lost or wasted all their property to gratify their appetites? That is the standard that the Free Press man sets up. If reports be correct neither Mr. Blaine nor Gail Hamilton have "lost all their property to gratify their appetites," and therefore, by the blackguard's own article, are not the people, fool or damphool. Not knowing anything about the man of the Detroit Free Press, we cannot say as to whether his own measure applies to himself, but the probability is that it does, for the man that so apparently contradicts himself in one short article in a newspaper cannot help, but must in the nature of things belong to such people. In last week's issue of the Herald in this place the blackguard that presides over, it reproduced the article from the Detroit Free Press against the editor of the Sentinel and Republican. Of course he could have no more discrimination than the man that wrote the article for the Detroit Free Press. Both being blackguards, their discrimination must needs be alike. In trying to apply the borrowed article from the Detroit paper to us he failed to see that the path of the article applies to himself and not to the editor of the Sentinel and Republican. "The loss and waste of property to gratify appetites" is the full measure of the fool and damphool of the character as described by the Detroit Free Press. The blackguard of the Free Press was writing of the class of men to which the blackguard of the Herald belongs, for he did lose or waste his property to appease his appetite; he did waste his inheritance. When he draws a picture of condemnation against a man for wasting his property and calls him a fool and damphool, how does he get out of taking the title upon himself? Thou art the man, Billy. Your property is all gone, and the very type and press and fixtures that you use to blackguard your betters with are held by transfer for the payment of money loaned you out of the Port Royal Bank to start the Herald. The transfer of the type, press and fixtures is in the pocket of a citizen of Mifflintown. The article of the blackguard of the Detroit Free Press fits his brother of the Herald in this place, but does not fit Blaine, Gail Hamilton, or the editor of the Sentinel and Republican. Blaine and Gail Hamilton, if reports are correct, are not bankrupt. We dislike to speak of ourselves, but we do not like to have imputed to us what belongs to men that impute what belongs to themselves. We cannot forecast the future; from our sight, as it is from the sight of every other man, but at this present time there is not a financial obligation against us, but that we can meet and cancel in twenty minutes, if presented during business hours. It is the blackguard of the Herald that fills the measure of the description of the blackguard of the Detroit Free Press.

There are men now abusing Blaine that were for him and Garfield until after the assassination of the latter; now they are great Arthur people. Perhaps the Detroit Free Press man is one of that kind. We have such people here, but of them again.

Communication.
FAYETTE TOWNSHIP, Nov. 26, 1881.
Editor Sentinel and Republican:
As it is a well-known fact that you throw the columns of your paper open to such of the people as desire to be heard on public questions, I come without hesitancy to express my disapproval of the river bridge at Mifflintown being made a free bridge at the public expense. I am told that the viewers appointed by the Court have reported in favor of a free bridge at the expense of the county, offering the Bridge Company thirteen thousand five hundred dollars for the bridge. The people do not desire to have the thing snaked through the grand jury. I do not say that the grand jury is composed of men that will lend a helping hand to snake the free bridge through, but there has been a good deal of talk within the past few years about grand jury fixers, and it is well enough now to look into that department, since such an important measure as that which is to affect the tax-payers to the extent of thousands of dollars is to come before it. The viewers did perhaps the best they could, and kept the price of the bridge down to a legal figure, thirteen thousand five hundred dollars; but without ever having been a stockholder in Mifflintown, I believe I am safe in saying that the stockholders will not take that price for it. Neither corporation or private individual can be robbed of his property, and from what little I know of the revenues of the bridge company it would pay a large dividend on the sum set apart for it by the viewers. If the county must have the bridge let it be not disgrace itself by robbing the company and taking a property much more valuable than the price fixed for its purchase. But the people of Juniata county do not want a free bridge, or free river bridges, because they are too burdensome for a little population of 18,000 people to keep up with all their expenses. If the bridge at Mifflintown is to be free, in all justice the bridge at Port Royal and the one at Thompsonstown should also be free, and a debt would be imposed on the county that would be far more burdensome than is the burden that is borne by a few people that live on either shore of the river near the bridge, when they pay toll. The few people that would be benefited in their business by a free bridge, certainly ought not to ask that the whole county be taxed to put a few dollars more into their private business. The free bridge will not be for the benefit of the many but for the benefit of the few.

Respectfully submitted by
A CITIZEN.
