Communication. Editor Sentinel and Republican-You are entitled to credit for opening the columns of your paper to correspondents. It is an evidence of liberality-of a disposition, on your part, to treat everybody fairly, and to allow both sides of a question to be heard. Any subject that interests your readers and affects a large number of persons, if moderately treated, is proper for the newspaper. To inform the public, and defend personal character, when it can be done in no other way, is one of the purposes of journalism. And editors who criticise you for meddling in church fights would do well to consider ing polygamy. who it was that re-opened the quarrel, what reason there was for it, and how else than H. Aikens is selling for $55, through the newspaper the remonstrating party could vindscate their good faith. The writer is not without hope that something has been gained in the interest of peace and for the honor of religion, by the publications you are comptained of for permitting. But for them it is not likely any attempt would have been made towards a reconciliation of differences. The one party, satisfied with their action, would have rested at ease; the other, feeling ag- The Huntingdon court house is to undergrieved, would have again resorted to litigation. It was not enough that through all last proportion of the best class of citizens of the concern while sitting under the thumb of another, is still spitting out his venom and endeavoring to figure before the public as a reformer, and posing at every opportunity as a veteran soldier of the Post. He nakes an elegant figure on Sus Parker's white horse on Post parade days; he looks fully as well, it has been remarked, as a bologna sausage on borseback, and would stand about as inuch fighting against rea soldiers, as a bolegns sausage would stand under the appetite of a lot of honest hungry vettrans that had just come off the march, or out of a fight. When Chaplain McCabe comes here to deliver his address or lecture, this quartermaster shyster soltake a front seat. He looks well in an andience. His turn-up sout nos : shows the holes in his smelling organ to advantage, and his back hair and plug neck sits admircoaxed to relate a reminiscence of shyster soldier achievement in the quartermaster's department, but might tell of how some other men did the fighting. His reminiscences are delightful tales to listen to. He might vary the entertainment by telling of his brave, sympathetic utterances in Patterson for the rioters of 1877; a little Compunism thrown in would entertain the Chaplain, and to instruct the lecturer in the utterances for an infidel crowd he uigh give him a sentence or two of scotling expression. It adds very much to the standing of the Post to shove such a valorious soldier to the front on every occasion. This marvelously brave soldier of the quartermaster's department has for help, as an ally in dirty, scurrilous writing and conspiracy work, Billy Allison, and there are a score of men in Junista county that could successfor having charged them with having prottituted the Common Schools. Billy is not under the thumb of Ezra, who rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, but he is under the thumbs of several, Henry Sulouff and so forth, unless indeed he has wriggled out recently from Sulouff and so forth, and is estling under the thumb, and in the pocket of another, who I will reveal in another communication, at a more convenient time. Billy was a valorious soldier, in the quartermaster's department, and the Post honors itself above all measure for coaching him. It was a wonderful hit when they brought him out to recite san original poem" in his highly cultivated elocutionary shrill voice style in the Court House. They should get him to recite that poem when McCabe comes. He would do it with dramatic effect. Perhaps McCabe would ask him to repeat it. By all means Billy should have a front seat after having been ushered in by the private or back entrance, and be seated in front, where McCabe can always have the author of the "original poem" to his eye. His face is a striking one; the holes in his soub nose do not show quite as distinctly as they do in the face of his A new schedule has been put into use on that the Herald is sent to, are laughing hundreds of certified cures, where all else other. GRAY HAIR TO ITS

YOUTHFUL COLOR

It supplies the natu-

hair glands without staining the skin. It will increase and thicken the growth of the hair, pre-vent its blanching and falling off, and thus AVERT BALDNESS.

It cures Itching, Eruptions and Dandruff. As a HAIR DRESSING It is very desirable, giving the hair a allken softness which all admire. It keeps the head clean, sweet and healthy.
