

Junata County Republican

B. F. SCHWEILER

THE CONSTITUTION—THE UNION—AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW.

Editor and Proprietor.

VOL. XXXVI.

MIFFLINTOWN, JUNIATA COUNTY, PENNA., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1882.

NO. 23

WHY NOT?

Why not? asked a timid maid of the shimmering sands that border the deep. But to answer she got into the water...

THE GERMAN.

Sit down, Betsy Ann; I've come glad to see you. Yes, I have been to Brighton on a visit to my nephew. I tell you they live in the tallest kind of style, right up to the handle.

They said "take me to see you because they were to have a German that evening." But between you and me they did not tickle at all.

Oh, Betsy Ann! if you could have heard them laugh. I was downright mad, and said, somewhat stiffly, "perhaps it's the king, himself."

After tea their grand parlors were lighted till you could pick up a pin anywhere about. And the girls and fellows standing around it was a party sight I tell you.

After a little they stopped, I suppose from sheer exhaustion, and walked up and down the room to cool off.

"My dear Betsy Ann," said I, "I never heard such sweet music. I felt most as if I was in the air somewhere."

After a while they all sat in two rows. First I knew the head fella and gal had each other about the waist and were bobbing all round those rooms.

The fiddlers again struck up and some fellow led her off. What do you think they did then? But a gal, the one that seemed to lead the lead throughout the performance, dropped into a chair with a footstool, hassoek they call it, at her feet.

After that the fiddlers and gals curtsied up to some boxes standing on a table and handed each other out of them some nice little things which they hung about their clothes. I couldn't see what they were, so I asked a pretty gal in pink.

An impatient fellow, standing by her side, clapped his hands, shouting "Party good, Miss Johnson, party good."

rushing up, crying, "Please explain, so we can all laugh." Then Jessie pulled my arm and said, "Aunt Jerusha, won't you please ask your questions of me?"

When I looked around to see how much I had lost a lady sat in a chair with a looking glass before her, and lots of fellows were brought up behind her.

After they had exhausted themselves and were again walking like rational human beings, I forgot what Essie said and asked a short girl in red, "What the performance was for."

While watching them I lost part of the show, for when I looked again a fellow and girl were going round and round, as if the evil one were after them, and if you'll believe me another fellow was doing just like them, only he was fanning a girl.

He looked at me for a while minute and a half before answering. I suppose he was astonished to meet with so unselfish a person as myself.

Directly he took the bottle and started for the gal, who by this time was leaning on her fellow's arm, all out of breath.

Such an uproar as that harbored made! Everyone in the room smelt of it, and passed it back and forth, until I could breathe no longer.

"What did it do? Why, I spoke up in a loud voice, and said: "Gals, if you keep that cork out so long, you'll spoil that harbored. It cost me just twenty cents at our store in Pokotawa."

I felt some one touch my arm, and I turned to see my nephew Jonathan—his wife calls him John—and invited me into his house to see some rare paintings.

He said "for the present, as the young ladies and gentlemen were now going for refreshments."

"Refreshments!" I exclaimed; "you don't mean to say all these young creatures are going to eat supper at this hour of night? It'll sartin spoil their digestion."

Just as I turned off the gas I heard the fiddlers strike up and knew the performance had again begun. I did think quite strongly of going down to see the thing out, but was just dropped asleep, but little figures kept dancing around my bed all night and kept up a peevish whirring all morning.

A Wayne county farmer who is much annoyed by tramps came to Detroit while ago and had a half a dozen signs of white and black painted to post "Smallpox—Beware!"

After that the fiddlers and gals curtsied up to some boxes standing on a table and handed each other out of them some nice little things which they hung about their clothes.

Cremation in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

Cremona in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

Cremona in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

Cremona in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

Cremona in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

Cremona in Japan. A young cadet midshipman, with the Asiatic squadron, writes from Yokohama as follows: "We wandered up a narrow path between black, barren looking peaks, and about half way up the mountain, upon turning a sharp corner we came into a gully between peaks, in the centre of which was a large stone square building with a cupola. This was the crematory."

It seems that yesterday, it was but a few years ago, that Mohammed Ali sprang from the lowest origin. A Macedonian boy and a French merchant, for his patron, became successively a brilliant soldier, an influential leader in the distracted state of affairs in Egypt after the French occupation, except manager of Cairo's politics and Egyptian ruler.

By the Mohammedan law the succession of princes is not from father to son in the direct line, but to the eldest male descendant of the reigning dynasty. But for England's love of the Sultan in Constantinople, the story of the last fifty years in the Levant would have been altogether another tale.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.

There is a colored lady in Cincinnati, who, after having been for some time under peculiar medical treatment, is gradually, but not completely, cured of her ailment.