Vibrations of Telegraph Wires -

Some interesting facts are brought out in a paper by M. C. Nie'sen, of Christiana, on the impression produced upon animals by the resonance of the vibrations of telegraph wires. It is tought that the black and green woodpeckers; for example, which hunt for insects in the bark and in the heart of decaving trees, often peok inside the circular hole made transversely through telegraph posts, near the top. The phenomenon is attributed to the resonance produced in the post by the vibration of the wire, which the bird mistakes as the result of the operations of worms and insects in the interior of the post. Everyone knows the fondness of bears for honey. It has been noticed that in mountainous districts they seem to mistake the vibratory sounds of the telegraph wires for the grateful humming of for the nive, Not finding it on the post, they scatter the stones at its base which help to support it, and, disappointed in their search, give the post a parting pat with their paw, thus showing their deter-inniation at least to kill any bees that might be about it. Indisputable traces of bears about prostrate posts and scattered stones prove that this really happens. With regard to wolves, again, M. Nielsen states that when a vote was asked at the time fo the first telegraph lines, a member of the Storthing said that although his district had no direct interest in the line proposed, ne would give his vote in its favor, because he knew the lines would drive the wolves LARD alone will make a tender, but from the districts through which they pasnot so flaky a pie crust as butter, or but- sed. It is well known that to keep off the ravages of hungry wolves in winter the farmers in Norway set up poles connected together by a line or rope, under which the wolves would not dare to pass.
