MALARIA

describable malady which not even the most talented physicians are able to fathom. Its cause is most frequently ascribed to local surroundings, and there is very little question, but this opinion is substantiated by facts. Malaria does not necessarily mean chills and fever while these troubles usually accompany it. It often affects the sufferer with general lassitude, accompanied by loss of appetite, sleeplessness, a tired feeling

Malaria once having laid its hold upon the human frame, the door of the system in thrown open to nervous disease. The body weak and enfeshled absorbs no nontrishment, but rubsisting upon buelf, she digestive organs no longer perform their functions; the liver becomes torpid, and other organs falling to de their routine work, speedily become disordered, and dissolution and death are apt
