

Men who have been looking up the pedigree of John Bunyan declare that he was a Gypsy.

The Jacksonian and Jeffersonian democrats are rushing to the front to declare themselves.

Arkison's majority is 721, just 3 more votes, than Fisher had in the Garfield campaign. Fisher's majority was 718.

Wells, Cameron has been unloaded, as people that do not like him call it. If the men that call themselves Republicans can stand it, Cameron can.

The Democrats are recovering from the daze of their great victory, and are beginning to hold justification meetings in different parts of the state.

Why discourse in a philosophical vein, and in sophomoric language over Republican defeat. We have nothing of the kind to write. We tell it plainly, all in one word. Suicide.

The Democrats, carried York State by almost 200,000 majority. They have carried two thirds of the 35 states, in which elections were held. That is news enough of the kind. Let us wait patiently for official returns and meanwhile read something more to taste.

In the 67 counties in this State, all but 18 gave a majority vote for Patterson. Republicans of this day and generation are not used to such defeats, and are stunned into silence. Patterson has about 40,000. The long or one waits for returns the worse they get. From present appearance it looks as if the Democrats will have no less than 65 of a majority in the next Congress.

The philosophical, Herbert Spencer goes back across the Sea, from America, disappointed. He failed to find the ideal man. He says Christianity and America had failed to produce him as a class, or congregation sufficiently marked from the average man. He finds in America, nothing new, and believes that when the public territory will have been peopled, a return to a state of society, such as exists in the old and populous districts of the world will be inevitable.

Benazroff, Pa., Nov. 10, 1882.—A. L. Zelinski, Esq., 2563 Germantown road.—Dear Sir: Yours of the 9th inst. received. I am quite satisfied with the result of the election, and have no regrets in regard to it. I did my duty so far as I could, and left the decision to the people. They ought to understand their own business best, and my hope is that they may be better served than I could have served them. Philadelphia did her duty fairly, and I am of course grateful to all my friends for their generous confidence and support. I will always stand by my old comrades as long as I live. Yours, JAMES A. BEAZER.

THE FALSE PROPHECY.
The reader knows that in Egypt with Anbi Pacha closed, but it is not known by everyone that in the far domain of the Khedive, a great religious war is progressing. A war that is waged by a man, who is styled by his opponents as the False Prophet, and by his followers as "The Imam Mahdi, or the prophet Allah."

The London News writes of him as follows: "The False Prophet claims to be the Imam Mahdi, or the last prophet Allah will send to conquer the enemies of Islam and rule supreme over the world. To such a person all Mohammedans would kneel and serve. Were he to appear in this character as a conqueror at Cairo the eclipse of Anbi, as well as of the Khedive, would be complete. The Sultan himself would cease to think of the Caliphate in the presence of such a pretense and representative of Allah on earth. The Imam Mahdi is to come, according to Mohammedan belief, accompanied with great signs and wonders, and he will appear shortly before the Judgment Day. He comes on a white horse. In this there is a manifest trace of Scripture ideas, which the Mohammedans have followed, and where the Hebrew Messianic notions may be traced. It need scarcely be stated that there have been many pretenders to this character in the East, and the Indian leaders during the mutiny often had wondrous tales of his appearance leading his army of white horses. The Imam Mahdi must be a visible ruler with power and victory on his side, and if the present pretender at Khartoum manages to spread the report that he is killing his enemies by the thousand he may be accepted most willingly by the Mohammedans. Even the defeat of Anbi, who claimed to be lighting for the cause of Islam, may have the effect of making the Mohammedans turn to this man, as their coming Prophet, should this peculiar result come to pass it should give the British troops some ground to stand on, for the new Imam is not likely to give any guarantee about such a truce as the Suez Canal. At present he is a long way off. Khartoum, of which he is said to be absolute, is about 300 miles in a direct line from Cairo and perhaps 1000 miles following the winding of the Nile. The town is the principal place in that region, and is situated among palm trees on the western bank of the Bah-el-Azrak, or the Blue Nile. This is close to the junction of that branch with the Bah-el-Azrak, or the White Nile. It is this position at the junction of the two main branches of the Egyptian river which gives Khartoum its strategic importance, and made it long the headquarters of the slave trade in Upper Egypt. For some years past the telegraph extended as far south as this, and travelers who visit the place are entertained by the ruins of Paris—a fact in a style reminding them of Paris—in fact those who have reached Khartoum after traveling in the desert and barbarous countries around it that it seems like Paris to find in that corner of the globe, who produce knives and forks, cut glass and silver and a menu of fish, meat and game and conversation carried on in French. A dance of Ranzor Nautch girls of the locality, when cigarettes are being smoked afterward, may remind them that they are not dining in a cafe on the boulevards. The Imam Mahdi, instead of accepting these civilities and making believe he was in Paris, is reported to have killed Abd-el-Kader, the Governor of the place, and he occupied it, and is getting his Nubian troops into a disciplined condition in order, no doubt, to carry on his conquests and keep up the character he has assumed.

Daniel Seabold and wife, of Ansville, were discovered at an early hour on the morning of Nov. 9, lying on their hands and knees in their bed room and in an unconscious condition. Mr. Seabold and his wife ate supper last evening in the best health. The brother of Seabold saw the door of their room open and found both husband and wife lying unconscious on the floor. A doctor was sent for. Mrs. Seabold vomited and revived first. Mr. Seabold was restored to consciousness. The doctor says they may have had poison in their food at supper. Other people believe it was coal gas from the kitchen stove, as the stove pipe was out of order, and the damper down.

VIENNA, November 7.—A poor man, supposed to be from Jackson parish, last night compelled the jailer to open the first door to the jail bars and they broke their way thence to the prisoners they wanted. Four were carried from jail who had been brought here from Jackson parish for safe-keeping. One of them made his escape immediately from the jail door, being fired on three or four times without effect, and another, it is thought, was given a chance for his life, as he was believed innocent. The other two were found this morning, about a mile and a half south of here dead and badly mutilated with bullets. They were negroes, charged with robbing and attempted murder of an old white gentleman by the name of Ray, but their attempt on his life was a failure. He described them, and when they were brought before him they identified them.

Pottsville, November 10.—At an early hour this morning fire broke out in the residence of John Hepler a well-to-do farmer living in Williamsstown Valley, near Tower City. Mr. Hepler was away from home. Mrs. Hepler and six children were all in bed at the time. The crackling flames, which quickly spread and soon enveloped the whole building, awoke Mrs. Hepler, who, conscious of the danger which surrounded her and her family rushed to the aid of the children, who slept in different rooms. She succeeded in rescuing five of them. Almost exhausted she again entered the burning building for the sixth child, an interesting two-year-old boy, the youngest of the family. Before she reached his bedside all means of escape were cut off and both perished in the flames. Their charred bodies, after the fire was found locked in each others arms. Mrs. Hepler was aged 45 years. The fire is supposed to have started in the kitchen. The house and all its contents were totally destroyed.

WASHINGTON, November 11.—The November corn report of the Department of Agriculture is of a similar tenor with preceding returns. The planting was later and replanting more general than for several years. The prospect up to July was discouraging, causing a sharp rise in values of grain and meats. Since that date the season has been steadily favorable to growth and ripening, and deferred frosts have made the growing period of fully average length. The condition on July 1, averaged 85; it was 83 in August; the same in September, and 81 in October, presenting a loss of over 450,000,000 bushels, which was fully realized.

The present returns of yield make a general average close to 25 bushels per acre, which is under a medium yield, confirming the prediction of September 1 that the average yield of 1879 and 1880 cannot be approached under the most favorable circumstances, which was 28 1-10 in the census year, while the average yield of ten years to 1880 was nearly 27 bushels.

The quality of the crop is superior throughout the South. It falls below the standard 100 in only eighteen States and Territories; only one point below in Michigan; two in Vermont and three in Nevada; six in Indiana, Vermont and Utah; six in New Jersey; eight in Colorado; nine in New York; ten in Rhode Island and New Mexico; fifteen in New Hampshire and Iowa; sixteen in Dakota; eighteen in Minnesota and twenty-two in Wisconsin.

Charlie Royer, Sheriff of Grand Co. W. T., while hunting last week, in Egria Park, had a close call from being captured by a grizzly bear. The day before Charlie and his brother had killed a couple of deer, and on going up from camp the next morning to pack in the deer they found nearly a half of one of the deer eaten up and the remaining half and the whole had been crushed. Seeing this on the ground they tracked the grizzly to his lair. The boys on finding him, opened a volley of shots from their rifles upon him, none of which proved fatal. The bear made tracks at a lively rate for a distance of three miles, his pursuers following closely in his wake. When they first saw him, he was not over 10 or 15 yards distant higher up the mountain, sitting in a pool of water. Charlie immediately fired at his head, but the shot took effect too late and succeeded only in breaking his jaw, which under the circumstances that followed proved very fortunate and probably saved the hunter's life. As quick as he had fired Charlie slipped his cartridge into his rifle and at the same time the bear gave a terrible roar and bounded towards him. Three leaps brought him nearly within reach of the end of the rifle, which Charlie had again aimed, but the cartridge missed fire and the next second the bear jumped on him and knocked him some 8 or 10 feet down the hill. While these movements were being executed, the whole of which occupied but a fraction of a minute, Harry was a short distance away, and Mr. Bruin jumped on Charlie after knocking him down, Harry drew his rifle and fired a well-directed shot, a bullet whizzing into the brain of the enraged brute, which immediately rolled over down the hill, kicking his last earthy kicks, while Charlie picked himself up and indulged in one of the longest and sweetest breaths on record.

Fourteen years ago John Otts, of Erie, told his son John, a lad of 10 years, to wait in a fence corner until he should be punished for a slight offense. The boy has never been seen since.

A Chicago man gave bail for the woman who had shot him, in order that she might be free to nurse him while he was recovering from the dangerous wound. She had intended to kill him, but he believed that she was sorry, and would take the best care of him as a matter of self-interest.

After the fire had been extinguished he was missed, and search was then begun for him, but so far as heard he is still at large.

Then and there I had said to God that I would renounce all the idols of which I had been made conscious if He would only let me do His work. Mr. Maples scaled the tree, pulled the squirrel out by the tail and beat it against a limb. In doing so he flourished his arm so vigorously that he threw his gun soundly out of joint. He was then in a perilous plight, disabled, thirty feet from the ground and a mile from help. Dr. Lepping set Mr. Maples, dislocated shoulder.

From the Vicksburg Herald.

A negro planter came to Vicksburg, the other day, sold his outfit, put his money in his pocket-book and started down the river. Looking too far over the guards, as the boat backed out, he fell overboard. His portmanteau, which was in his side pocket, fell out and rode with his hat on the surface of the water, while the current carried the negro away. The yawl was lowered and assistance at once started toward the drowning man, who, perceiving his treasure floating off, raised his voice and shouted: "Save dat pocket book!" His head went under and he disappeared. As he rose up again he gasped: "Dat's one hundred and sixteen dollars in dat pocket book!" Scarcely had he uttered the words until he sank a second time. The yawl came within reach just in time to save the drowning African, as he came to the surface for the last time. As soon as the water was wiped from his nose and mouth so that he could speak, he said: "Did—did you save dat pocket book?" "No," was the response. "Well, den," said the negro, regretfully, "what de dobble was de use ob savin' me?"

A Strange Story in Alabama.
From the Union Springs Herald.

We have often heard of fish being rained from the clouds, but have never seen an eye witness to the phenomenon until last week. S. P. Thompson, one of our leading prairie planters, assures us that on the 12th of October he saw three fish of the perch variety fall into his front yard during a shower of rain. Mr. T. gathered up the fish, which were still alive, notwithstanding their long and rapid journey through space toward the center of gravity, and after satisfying himself that they were only ordinary perch, placed them in an adjacent stream, where they swam off as lively as if terraced streams and not celestial vapors were their natural element. Mr. Thompson says that he is not a natural philosopher enough to explain this strange occurrence, but that he is absolutely certain that the fish did fall from the clouds.
