

OVER-WORK has driven Gladstone out of London.

GOVERNOR PATTERSON, will attend the Grace Methodist church in Harrisburg.

F. B. GOWEN has been re-elected President of the Reading railroad company.

JUDGE BARRETT, is presiding over the Foster-Wagner Senatorial contest at Carlisle.

THE CAR OF RUSSIA, has issued a decree forbidding the organization of secret societies.

PHILADELPHIA and Harrisburg are talking of establishing a telephone line by way of Reading.

LETTERS have been sent to the Legislature asking for a repeal of the bill that closes the soldiers' orphan school in 1885.

A BILL has been introduced in the Legislature, that provides for granting pensions to surviving soldiers of the Mexican war.

THE STATE SENATE defeated the bill to increase the salaries of Orphans' Court Judges of Philadelphia, from $5,000 to $7,000 per annum.

SEVERAL houses were destroyed by fire, in Madison Park, last Wednesday. Great consternation prevailed among the people all day.

REPRESENTATIVE DAVIS, of Fayette Co., has not passed on his bill at Harrisburg, to take the oath of office as a member.

IT will be to his credit, if he does not do so until after he has answered in court, for the shooting of Captain Nutt.

CHAPLAIN HERRICK, in his prayer, in the Lower House, at Harrisburg, last Thursday morning, said: "We thank God that the citizen is now in the ascendant, and that no longer we fear the influence of the military, and of war, and death."

IT is said that the days of the pudding furnace has been numbered, and that they must pass away because of the discovery of a new process of making iron direct from ore.

By the new process it is said iron can be made in 40 minutes time.

Tennessee proposes to repudiate half the State debt. The private credit that says to his creditors take 50 cents on the dollar, repudiates to the same extent that Tennessee has.

The late Treasurer of Tennessee took five hundred thousand dollars and invested it in Mexican mines, and then fled from the State.

ORAN in Clinton county, during the late court a lot of jurors were docked $200 each for tardiness. The jurors are part of the court, and the pity is that they have not the right to dock the other parts of the court occasionally for tardiness, a little docking all around, once in a while, would help things amazingly.

THE State Senate, with one exception, unanimously confirmed the nomination of Mr. Cassidy as Governor Patterson's Attorney General.

The exception was Senator Kennedy of Philadelphia. The Senator decried the reform movement of the Democracy a farce in the light of the fact that Mr. Cassidy is the chief lawyer of the Patterson administration.

Mr. Patterson, and Mr. Cassidy may be happy, but a large percentage of the Democracy are not happy.

THE Philadelphia Record says: The little town of Camden, Maine, is in a state of uproar over its post office.

The present postmaster, a crippled veteran of the war, has been over-ruled and a stalwart politician named in his place.

The former refused to pay a campaign assessment on his limited salary, and the feeling is strong that his removal is due to this cause.

The civil service reform stock of the Administration is quoted at very low figures in Camden.

The inauguration of Governor Patterson was a plain affair. He came to Harrisburg the day before inauguration day. He refused a carriage and escort, and with a few friends he walked across the city to the river, and on Front St. stopped with a friend over night.

On the morning of the 15th, he went to Governor Hoyt's house, and there met a Legislative committee, on inauguration ceremony, and they with Hoyt walked to the Capitol and remained in the Executive chamber, till the hour for the ceremony, when he and Governor Hoyt walked down stairs and out on the portico, where the oath was administered by Justice Frankly.

There were many bands and clubs in the city, in playing, and marching in order. But they all had to march with out the Governor. Such an ignoring of demonstration is something new to this generation.

Some people are naughtily enough to say that, if father Cassidy's stars, of anti-fasc and feathers. But peace, let the Governor, and Mr. Cassidy have a chance.

Immediately after the oath was administered the Governor proceeded with his inaugural address.

The opening was full of recognition of the Divine favor, and of the material property of the State.

He expressed a desire to ascertain the public will on public questions, and solicited a free communication between the people and the Executive.

In matters of civil service he proposes to make fitness and integrity the tests for appointment.

He favors an equal distribution of taxation.

He believes that corporations have not lived up to the requirements of the constitution.

He deprecates the conflicts, that frequently rise between labor and capital, and looks hopefully for legislative enactment, that will prevent a resort to the bayonet, to bring such disturbances to a solution.

The question of the apportionment of the State is spoken on, and a spirit of fairness is enjoined upon the Legislature. The late Legislature is reminded, that it violated the Constitution, last session by not passing an appropriation bill.

Lieutenant Governor elect, Chauncey Black, after the inauguration of the Governor, took the oath of office in the Senate Chamber.

Letter from an Old Jacksonian Democrat of Greenwood Township.

NEAR SEVEN-STAR TAVERN, January 20, 1883.

My Dear Mr. Editor:—We had a full house and a splendid time at the Stars to night. It wasn't women and wine that we talked about. It was something stronger. It was prohibition and politics. To be sure something was said about the boys sleighing around these nights with their sweethearts, but there was little to talk about women, aside from one old Andy Jackson fellow who said the grand old sleighing that he ever did, was on a board, or small sled with a girl seated before him, sliding down hill. He said that in his time he had danced in cotillon, polka and waltz, and taken a hand in the socializing parties, but none of them came up to the delight of sliding down hill on a little sled, or on a board with a woman seated in front, and in his arms. He said that he would like to slide into paradise in that way. We took a snooker all around over that, and resolved that the total question shall be left out till the time comes to vote on it. The snooker was good, but I guess the resolution was better.

Some of our old Hickory friends were down to the inauguration of Patterson, and they came home full of politics. They thought it is a grand thing to get rid of a soldier Governor. They said that we had a military revolution that changed the whole system of government, and now after a rule of military men we are to have a rule by civilians. I thought that that great Jacksonian boy, was an old Hickory military development. They thought it was grand to see a Democrat inaugurated, after being out in the cold nearly a quarter of a century. They couldn't tell us enough about the plain ways of Patterson. How they talked about him not riding in a carriage with banditti-looking his approach. They thought it was a sign of greatness that he walked without a procession to the house of a friend, and from there to the Capitol where he was sworn in by one of the judges of the Supreme Court. We all thought that was a sign of a big man, and were about to give three cheers for Patterson, when the same old Andy Jackson fellow, that talked about sliding down hill with a woman in his arms, said, hold on boys. That talk of Patterson was a sham, gotten up to catch greenhorns. That's saying a good deal, but don't you forget it, that last fall when he was swinging around the circle, out in Clinton he got in a carriage and the wild Democrats of that town unhitched the horses and hauled Patterson through the streets by hand. I tell you that man that will allow a crowd to do that, and then on inauguration day, refuse a carriage and all procession courtesies, is playing off on us people. That little speech settled the matter; it came down like a wet blanket.

Patterson's administration can't be like old Hickory's. Old Andy was the boss himself, but Patterson's boss is Cassidy. Don't you pick me wrong. I am not abusing the Governor, or Cassidy. I am only stating facts, and if they are not what you would like to have then I can't help it. I know that way last summer, you said in the Sentinel that Cassidy would be the head of Patterson's administration, should he be elected, you were correct, so all see it now. It is a good thing for Patterson if he has a boss. It is some thing that the average man needs though they don't want to believe it. About 95 per cent of all the men and women that come and go through this world are failures, morally, politically, and financially, such people all should have bosses. Fortunate indeed is the man or woman that has a competent boss. Some times men want to boss that are in need of a boss themselves. Old Andy was a competent boss in many things. In a meeting he was a year boss. I am not going to say that Cassidy can boss Patterson in the right way to run this State for the people. I have serious doubts about it for his inaugural address forbade an effort to create a movement against the corporation. It seems to me that Cassidy lost his better judgment when he allowed that address to go before the country, perhaps, he is blinded with the desire to start the U. S. Senate, and hopes to start a policy that will be popular with the people. People are frequently taken off on a wrong scent when they want to do what is right. Perhaps he wants to play Old Andy who you know just as soon as he got into office went for the U. S. Bank, and uprooted the concern and kept the crowd yelling on that point, until the wild cat banks of the states were set up. That was a plan of systematic robbery of the means of the people, by leaving them without proper legislative protection. It was a regular confidence game legalized by State legislative enactment.

The banks were allowed to issue money, and receive deposits, without being required to give proper security. Nearly all the soundness in the country took advantage of the wild cat banking enactments and went into banking and robbed the people, who had confidence in them. That was one of the iniquitous things that followed Old Andy's boss rule. If Cassidy, and Patterson, can start such a wrecking movement against corporations, as Hickory started in the finances of the country, it will be a calamity for the country. Patterson's delirance against the corporations, may be the delirance, or gush of a fresh man; but Cassidy should have kept him out of that, but I rather suspect that it is the cunning of the schemer, who is looking ahead for comfortable political place, and to secure it, proposes to organize a party against corporations. Time will tell, meanwhile keep your top eye open, for Cassidy and Patterson. Good night, Yours Truly,

BARTON STARK.

THE Greenback Congressmen, at Washington held a meeting of their own, and predicted a great financial panic as approaching. The Greenbackers may be correct in their predictions, but financial predictions, from such sources are not of the most reliable kind.

The experience of a western farmer, in a blizzard is thus described in a western paper: About 1 o'clock, while we were in a dry goods store, the merchant, who had stepped out a moment before, said to me: "I don't like to drive away my customers, but a blizzard is coming from the west, and it is coming fast. The telegraph announces that it has reached Moravia. That is forty miles from here, but it is coming at the rate of forty miles per hour, so you have got no time to spare if you are going home to day."

He rolled up our purchases as he spoke, and appeared to be in a hurry to get rid of us. When we got outside the store the first thing that attracted my attention was the fact that all the teams in the street when we arrived none excepting mine remained. Everybody had scudded for home. Even then I did not hurry. The sun was still shining brightly with not the faintest suggestion of a storm apparent. Before we had got ten a mile from town I had forgotten all about the coming storm, and the horses were joggling at their will.

We were still two miles from home when suddenly the sun was obscured and the air grew cold and chill in a moment. A darkness as of smoke swept over everything. Then I remembered why we were going home, and I gave the horses the whip in earnest, lashing them into a run. Away due to the west they appeared to be a leaden wall sweeping toward us. There was a hum in the air. A light breeze sprang up, grew stronger, and in one minute became a gale. The wall came down with railroad speed, the roar of its approach every instant growing louder. From the top of a roll in the prairie we could see our house, and it came pretty near being our last glimpse of it.

No words will ever convey an intelligent idea of the blizzard; of the frightful roar with which it rolls down upon you; the howling and hissing of the wind. If you try to speak the wind dashes the syllables from your lips so quickly that you do not hear it. It is as if you were in thirty seconds from the time the first snowflake fell I could not see my horses. The atmosphere appeared to be all snow, and every flake was in a hurry to get somewhere before the red should get there. I use the word "flakes," but that is wrong. No flakes could be distinguished. The whole atmosphere was filled with one big flake that hummed us in on all sides. Although Mabel's head went over a foot from mine, I could not see her features, and could only dimly see her form. I tried to peer downward behind the sleigh and see the track, but I might as well have tried to see the earth beneath the snow bank, for I could feel a motion to the sleigh, so that I knew the horses were still moving. The cold was intense. I tried to ask my wife if she was suffering, but I could not hear my own words.

During the two or three minutes that intervened between the time I saw the storm approaching and the moment it struck us the horses had run at the top of their speed, so we were not much over a mile from home. It did not seem possible for the horses to keep the track. No one could live an hour in that storm. The only hope lay in the horses being able to keep to a track that was being buried deeper and deeper every instant. It isn't pleasant to sit still and freeze to death. In ten minutes I was chilled through and I felt that I was freezing. The horses were still moving, and although I could not see them, I lashed them with the whip. It seemed hours since the storm had shut us in, and I was just becoming convinced that the horses had got out of the path and that we were lost on the prairie when the snow came a hull of the storm wind. The air was still full of whirling snow, but I could see objects about me to ascertain that we were in the barn and were safe. I had left the barn doors open in the morning, and the horses had found their way back, I think, by instinct, but my neighbors think it was sheer accident, and declare that it wouldn't happen again in a thousand years.

The Atlanta Tribune says: Only $56,567 was bid for the Wm. M. Lloyd assigned property in Atlanta, at the assignee's sale last week. It comprises over sixteen acres of land within the city limits, a stone residence, and other buildings. The amount was not considered by the assignee as a fair price for the property and the sale was adjourned until May 15, when the property will be offered in regular town lots.

G. W. Nittner, Lebanon, Pa., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters effectually cured me of rheumatism."

The Perry Home Journal says: last Tuesday evening T. J. Anderson well known among Georgia farmers, secured nearly two gallons of milk from two cows, and when the milk was strained, in less than five minutes after milking a lump of pure butter the size of a pean nut was found in the bottom of the strainer. We had heard of butter coming direct from the udder of cows, but until Tuesday night we had always regarded all such statements as being untrue. The butter spoken of was now taken out of the strainer and we know there is no error in the statement we have made.
