THE TWO FLEETS.

The sun was bright and the sea was bland, And the tide dances in as merrily, When a sailor pushed his boat from the sand; And the waves kept time with his nomely glee, For the sailor hummed, "Two feets there be: And one sails over the sun-lit waves, And one lies under the sombre sea."

The sea was bland and the sun was bright, And a favoring wind blew fresh and free And the less ning sail disappeared from sight; But the old refrain still remained with me Which the sailor sang-"Two ficets there be; And one sa is over the sun-lit waves,

The tide danced out with the freight it bore; Ah, the tide came back soon smilingly, But the sailor's boat never touched the shore: From the haunting strain, "Two fleets there is And one salis over the sun-lit waves,

And one lies under the sombre sea. The fleet sails down to the dismal lee-To the fleet where every sall is furled; And my heart keeps time to the mystic key, White I drift and sing, "Two fleets there be: and one sails over the sun-lit waves, And one lies under the sombre sea.

So a little while and he who sings Shall hum no more his songs to thee; Shall hear, perchance, when they cannot see The lips which sing, "Two fleets there be: And one sails over the sun-lit waves, And one lies under the sombre sea.
