Mr. Down, the commander of the Salvation Army is opposed to the giving of gifts. "He has dismissed three officers who had been pretentious with gold watches as gifts from their admiring friends. He called it bribery and corruption, and their expulsion was a summary proceeding."

SOME of the United States Senators are in favor of the government erecting telegraph lines and keeping them up. That is a step in the direction of too great centralization of power. The basis of Republican government is, for government to not engage in any enterprise that the people are willing to carry on by private, enterprise, or by corporation.

The railroad accidents, disasters at sea, incendiarism, fires, robberies, murders and personal encounters have been so numerous since the year 1883 came in, that one grows sick of their recital from week to week. If they are to be continued throughout the year, 1883 will prove itself to be the most shocking in calamity, and outrage of all the years.

Let us all hope for better events from this out.

The North American says: Tom Thumb celebrated his forty-sixth birthday in Chicago on the 4th inst. He says when Barnum first got hold of him he was only five years of age, and was so light a strong man could hold him in the palm of his hand.

It was frequently carried by Barnum in his overcoat pocket. Tom says when he says, "Alas! how I have grown since then."

SOME days ago a number of cars of a passenger train going up a grade of 120 feet to the mile of a California mountain railroad, broke loose and ran back and off the track, producing a wreck in which a number of passengers were killed.

The breaking of the coupling it was first believed was accidental, but a San Francisco dispatch states that, from evidence given at the inquest on the victims of the disaster, instead of being an accident, the affair grew out of an attempt to wreck the train for the purposes of robbery, and that the two strange men found dead in the wreck were part of the gang who planned the robbery.

The New York Independent says: The average of published murders throughout the United States in 1882 was at the rate of two a day, or 730 for the whole year, while the number of executions was but 101. New York State furnished 131 of these murders, of which 76 occurred in this city, and 14 in Brooklyn, with only 4 executions in both cities. These figures mean that a great many escaped the gallows who ought to have been hanged.

The North American says: The condition of affairs in the Controller's office is most awkward and embarrassing to all the regular business of the city government, and unless speedily settled this contest must lead to serious responsibility for interested, legal costs and other expenses. The credit of this achievement is solely due to Governor Pattison for refusing to vacate the office till the very last moment before becoming Governor. And this is called reform by the Democrats.

The Philadelphia Times relates the following: There is one young woman in Allentown who never will go sleighing again. On Monday night in company with a young man from the lower end of Lehigh county, she went into the country for a sleigh ride. When returning home at midnight the young man fell asleep, and in reaching for a handful of snow, the young woman fell from the sleigh. The young man slept on in peace and quiet. The horses trotted back to their stable. In half an hour the young woman entered Allentown on foot and went to the stable to get her purse, which had been left in the sleigh. The young man had no use for the purse just at that time, and subsequently the young woman had no use for the young man.

The Philadelphia North American takes the position that no sick man should be allowed to get aboard of a passenger railway car, unless some competent physician shall have first inquired as to his disease is not contagious. A man may leave San Francisco with the contagion in his system and land on the Atlantic coast before he is very sick. That cannot be defended against perhaps. But it is always optional with station masters whether a sick person shall be allowed in the waiting rooms or to enter a railway car. Some sort of supervision is absolutely needed for the protection of the public; otherwise no contagious disease like the smallpox can be limited in its spread. The danger is greater in cold than in warm weather, yet is present in all weather, and must be defended against.

A liver man was sued for damages at Nebraska city, because the horse he had hired out to a young couple for a drive run away and threw them out of the sleigh; but he proved by the plaintiff's own testimony that a struggle for a kiss was the cause of the accident, and the jury acquitted the horse of all blame.

Last week two tin-ware peddlers, named respectively Herman Hendrix, and Harris Cooper, foreigners, were arrested for peddling without license. They were taken before Squire Parker. They were not able to pay the fine for the violation of the license law, and not able to obtain bail and consequently were sent to jail.

It will be a long time yet till the chilly weather comes to an end, and the dangerous time to health is in the fall and spring time. You will need an overcoat to protect you against the spring change. Harley has reduced the price of his overcoats. He has also reduced the price of all kinds of clothing for men and boys. Now is the time to buy.

Exchange papers are publishing the following: Circulars are being sent to soldiers in different sections of the country, by western parties, for the sum of $10, 100 and $500. Land will be secured, without the formality of occupying it for four years—less the time of service in the army, as provided by law. The land commissioner at Washington States that the law remains unchanged, and that the circulars are for the purpose of deception.

The Philadelphia Record Almanac for the year 1883, is an attractive pamphlet, containing a large number of interesting pictures: political and government data, with time of frosts in harness, in wagon, four in hand and under the saddle, also time of running races, and walking races, and rowing matches. It is a handy almanac to have. Twenty-three pages, are devoted to an encyclopaedia of quotations, all alphabetically arranged. It is a credit to get out such an almanac.

William Pasick, while coasting on Cherry Street hill, last Wednesday evening dropped his hat. Search was made for the hat: it was not found for the reason that another boy, had taken up the hat, and thrown it in a passing sleigh. The sleigh chanced to be one from this place going to Salem. The hat was not noticed by the parties in the sleigh, till their return, late at night, from their long drive. They were at a loss to know whose the hat came from, but when they began telling their neighbors, on Thursday morning about it, the fact was not long in reaching William Pasick; he speedily put in an appearance and received his hat.

On the 24th of January when the cold was severest, the people of Wilkesburg this state, experienced a phenomenon that will never be forgotten by those who passed through it. About 40 acres of the town sunk. The shock was like that of an earthquake, all the walls of the houses in that district were more or less damaged, and many of them have to be vacated. The sinking took place at night, and the consternation can better be imagined than described. The people ran out of their houses into the streets in their night clothes. No lives were lost. The sinking of the ground it is said was owing to props in the coal mines giving way. The ground sunk 12 to 18 inches in some places.

On Sunday, January 7, Kate A. Rudd joined the church in Newport, R. I. On the morning of January 24, about 5 o'clock she went into the cellar of her employer, J. G. Weaver and set fire to a wood pile, holding a candle to the wood, until it was set on fire. She then speedily went to her room, and remained there till notified that the house was on fire by Mrs. Weaver. Suspicion fell upon her, she was arrested and confined in jail in default of $10,000 bail.

A reliable contractor: "Here, Sam, is a note I want you to hand to Mrs. Eaton Maholey when you are sure nobody is looking," said an Austin society man, to Sam Johnson, colored. "Yes, sah," answered Sam, showing his ivory. "And, mind, don't you whisper a word to a living soul." "You may jest rest easy about dat or boss. Yesterday I fotched dat same woman a letter from Colonel Percy Yergler. You can jest rest easy about my openin' my mouf"—Texas Sitings.

People that cultivate the strawberry may be interested in the following which is taken from a Virginia paper: A Southern amateur gardener secured slabs from the saw mill and bored two-inch holes in them fifteen inches apart and laid them round side up upon the edge of some beds, and set a strawberry plant in each hole in August. Such a profusion of strawberries as he had from each of five experimental varieties was a sight worth beholding. When other strawberries in the neighborhood were all dried up by the great drought of that season his were perfection. A half pint or more were taken at a time from each plant. It was but little trouble to keep the runners down.

A down cast paper says: The famous lime lava of Connecticut, enacted by "the people of the Dominion of New Haven," were so called because they were printed on blue paper. They prohibited the ceremony of marriage being performed by a person, on the strange ground that a magistrate might perform it without sanction to the church. Adultery was punished by death. Wearing clothes trimmed with gold, silver, or lace above one shilling a yard, was punished by a fine of $15. "No one to cross a river on the Sabbath but authorized clergymen. No one shall travel, cook, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair, or shave on the Sabbath or fasting days. The Sabbath day shall begin at sunset Saturday."

The following is from the Philadelphia Record: Harry Beck, the Wilkesburg bar-tender, who swallowed his teeth, on Friday night, the 10th inst, and whose friends thought he would die, arrived in this city, on Saturday afternoon, and at once proceeded to the office of Dr. D. H. Hayes, Agnew. He said that the accident happened while he was eating a plate of oysters. He bit upon a shell, breaking two of his teeth from an upper plate containing four. The plate was loosened in his mouth and, with the two remaining teeth, was swallowed, lodging in the throat. He proceeded to his home, and four physicians were summoned. Their efforts to remove the teeth were ineffectual, as the proper instruments were not procurable, though one of the physicians declared his ability to remove them, if Mr. Beck would allow him to administer chloroform. To this Mr. Beck objected. In the meantime the teeth had worked downward to near the stomach, and were felt there with an instrument inserted by Dr. Murphy. The unfortunate man suffered greatly from the effects of his strange accident. He was unable to eat anything, but could drink a little water. Dr. Agnew on Saturday afternoon, brought a goodly what difficult operation, brought up the teeth. Mr. Beck has not been seriously injured by the singular occurrence.

The Hanington Industrial Reformatory needs $900,000 to complete the institution. The Legislature will be asked to appropriate this amount. The Philadelphia Times Almanac, for 1883, is a complete digest of Pennsylvania election laws; game laws; list of foreign words and phrases; list of office holders in the several departments of the Federal government; list of churches in Philadelphia, and much other valuable data. Besides all that, of course it contains moon phases, time of eclipses and so forth.

The medical grave robbers over in Canada are bolder than in the United States, as is evidenced by a despatch from Montreal under date of last Wednesday. The despatch says:—In relation to the recent wholesale robbery of graves that occurred here yesterday a scene which would disgrace Dahomy. Complaints that students have been robbing graves in the surrounding country, have been numerous of late, and the outrages have become so impudent and daring that in the country villages and hamlets near by, people bury their dead within the shadow of their own dwellings until decomposition renders them useless for the purpose of dissection. All bodies had been stolen from Vanderul cemetery and others from villages in this vicinity, which the police found, and arrested one of the thieves, who was to have been tried this afternoon. Whether meditating a rescue or not does not appear, but at 2 o'clock 100 medical students led McGill college gaiters and thigh bones, which they carried off in their arms, and were singing college songs and music playing in different ways, until they reached the police court, which they entered with a rush. In a few moments they commenced a series of insulting remarks to the court, who ordered the high constable to clear the room. He tried to do so, but the students turned upon him, and so buffeted and gaged him that he drew his revolver. At this moment a posse of police, who had been sent for to come to his rescue and he pocketed the weapon. The medics then for a moment and then the actual serenade began, blows being given and returned. The police triumphed in the end, having used their batons well. The college boys were compelled to retreat, with the exception of a few of the ringleaders, the police managed to secure. The human relics were taken from the grounds, who carried them as far as it was possible to do so. The main effort, however, was directed to driving the whipped bodies back to the college. Shortly afterward those taken prisoners were discharged also without trial. In this way it is claimed the magistrates encourage these college escapades. The students always escape punishment, even when in their acts.
