A Carnival in The Camp

New Year's day the Kettle Creek Camp, Pa, was deserted, and the boom, boom of the logs striking each other on the toy slide was not heard resounding for miles in the frosty air. Everything was quiet, and except the circling heat waves from the rough stone chimney and the neighing of horses in the barn there was little enough of an inhabited look about the home of fifty lumbermen. The men were a few miles away, keeping New Year's. The kotel where they held their carnival is primitwe and rude, like their own camp, and its low ceiling is smoked and rough as a hunter's shanty. The bar room floor is of pme and reasonably smooth, and on one side is a stained place, which the proprietor always keeps uncovered, where a gambler and a desperado feli dead from a blow dealt by a numberman he had defrauded.

"Set 'em up, Johnny," said one of the lumbermen, "and come up, boys, and take something; and you, too, stranger, if you don't mind taking a health with a rough-looking crowd like this." Then, as a sort of after-thought, he concluded : "We are not as rough inside as we are out, and maybe some are better than finer-looking gentlemen who don't work for a hving.'

The boys came up' some with coats cn, some without, the gray, red or fancy-trimmed woolen shirts alone covering the broad shoulders and brawny arms. A strong, robust lot of men they were as they came up to the rude bar, and one could scarcely find a more picturesque group in color and general make-up than touched glasses to the sentiment, "A good winter, a lucky job and no accidents."

After drinking, the men went-some to the card room, where "seven up," "enchre," "pitch" and kindred games of chance were played-and others to the ball room, where two swarthy Italwith a bass viol, made passable music for the dance. The girls from the camps and a score of comely German girls from the settlement near by furnished partners enough for all who cared to and bacon is furnished by a gentleman dance, and no one ever saw a jollier dance than that of those lumbermen and their partners. There was no rude- Leave the meat in a strong brine for seven ness, no profamity, and the merry pigs were cut down as gracefully as one often sees them performed. Every movement in the dance, from the superlatively low bow at the commencement to the sweeping courtesy when a partner was seated on the bench at the conclusion, was suggestive of mirth and good feeling.

"Take a drink," was the welcome that greeted every one who came in, and even the negro hostler, barber and man-of-all-work around the hotel was made welcome to the hospitalities of the Kettle Creek Camp. "If you don't want anything stronger take a glass of Schwarzenback's beer-that won't hurt anyone," said a stalwart lumbermen to one who offered excuse, "No? then take a cigar, anyway. The ten cent box, mind,"-to the barkeeper, as the candidate compromised on nicotine,

The ten-pin alley was an attraction, Two of the boys were rolling to see which should treat the crowd. "Hi ! look out there !" called one to the boy who put them up and was standing near the bed ; "you may catch one of these balls, for sometimes they dodge," and as the wooden sphere shot like a cannon ball from his sinewy arm the caution seemed not misplaced.

"There, that settles it." said the victor as he tumbled the whole ten for the er. second time at a single throw, "You pay for the drinks this time,"

'All right," responded the

Again the glasses clinked, and this time they drank to the health of an absent chum and his blue-eved German sweetheart, who brought him home for the holiday.

All though the day and beyond the middle of the night the revels lasted, and when the hotel was at last vacated and the men drove back to camp it seemed as if they were the jolliest, merriest crowd that ever faced the storms and dangers of a woodsman's life. Strong and healt by, mured to toil and hardship, in their merry-making they exhibited the careless, unrestrained joyousness of overgrown boys and seemed thoroughly in sympathy with the holiday season they enjoyed so largely. Watching them in their merry-making it appeared hardly possible that they could exhibit the tenderness seen only a week later in the same camp that turnished men for the New Year's dance.

One of the accidents so common in the lumber regions visited the camp at Kettle Creek. One of the men was watching the slide where the logs came down to see that they kept the track ra among hogs, when just above him a swiftly-moving log jumped the track, striking him and crushing him to death instantly. He was taken up and carried to camp on a hastily-improvised hier made of pine branches, and he was laid out in one of the girl's rocms and the men talked over what should be done with him.

"He came from Maine and hain't no relatives near here, as far as I know,' said the boss, "and I don't even know what part of the State he came from. All we can do is to bury him and advertise for the family, to send his wages away.

So it was decided to bury the man in the woods, with a great pine tree, under whic' he had many a time eaten his dinner to mark the place. The sermon was short, and the speaker in an impressive way commented on the dangers of the life in the woods and the special need for preparation for sudden death. Speaking of the deceased, he said : "He was not ready to die, and I dinary clean hay can always be fed with would wish you to leave off many of his faults; but there was much in him that was noble and manly, and these qualities we will all do well to remember and emulate. For comparing the sensitivity of differ CURE FOR ALL KINDS OF PILES. ent persons, Mr. Francis Galton used weights in ascertaining the facts he wished to arrive at-the test being what difference could be detected by the persons handling certain weights. These are his provisional results, subject, of course, to correction, but surprising enough, for all that: 1 Intellectually able men had more discriminating power, on the whole, than with mint. The addition of three or women of a like cast of mind. 2. Men, as four tablespoonfuls of the liquor from a rule, had a greater ability of estimating accurately ti an women. 3. What appears strange is that women of very sensitive natures did not seem to be more capable of distinguishing between different degrees than their more callous sisters. 4. What is stranger still 15, that the investigator says he found the blund, as a whole, were not peculiarly sensitive to the test, but rather the reverse. Some of the gentlemen in charge of our public institutions might profitably employ their lessure on such in quiries. The facts would be probably of unexpected importance.
