Evan in winter when the snow in our climate has everywhere white about us there are plenty of green trees, so that by gazing at these or by looking at the sky and distant hills we can seek and may find relief for the eyes from the daz The first suggestion that we will make is that it would be desirable to have the windows of the sleeping room covered with colored shades of some sort; even the palest gray or blue in preference to the prevalent white. The walls also ought to be tipted, or papered with medium or light shades of gray, blue or brown. Greens also are ocquently employed in giving the tinge to green papers, these should by carefully avoided for the sake of the health, despite their agreeable quality when gazed upon, We may remark here, by way of parenthe sis, that the sale of wall papers supposed to contain arsenic ought to be prohibited by law. Several cases of poisoning from the presence of these papers in dwelling rooms and houses have been correctly at tributed to this cause; the discuse ceased when the walls were cleansed. Mysterious Disspipearances Explosive as aitro-giycerine is known to be, it is far inferior in power to many other explosives. Among the new additions to the materia medica are several which, though harmless when unine form an explosive in comparison with which nitro-grycerine is tame and harmless, Now, it often happens that a person, after garging his throat with giveerine, swallows a chlorate of potash ozenge. It is then only necessary for him to experience a slight concussion, such as is procdeed when a man accidentally stumbles' and strikes a lamppost, for an explosion to follow. Tineture of rodine is also frequently applied to the interior of the throat of a patient, mere vibration of the throat caused by an effort to speak will result in an explesion.
