An exchange says, of all the little, mean, detestable mortals allowed to sojourn on this earth, none are worse than the loafer who squats around to tell you all the disagreeable stories he knows or imagines he knows, about his acquaintances.

Member of the New Club—"Professor, I have called to ask you to give us a motto for our new club. I want something suggestive, in Latin. Well, yes; I know of a very good one—just the thing—'Dourium tremens!'—Louisville Courier Journal."

"Arrested for carrying a pistol, was he?" asked a magistrate of an officer, referring to a gentleman who had just been arraigned. "Let me see the pistol." The weapon was produced and handed to the judge, who examined it and asked: "Where did you get it?" "Bought it at a hard ware store." "What did it cost?" "Fifteen dollars." "Fine implement. How'll you stop?" and the judge drew out a pistol and handed it to the prisoner. "Take $10 to boot." "All right. I'll fine you $10. That's all you've got."

The Hawkeye truthfully remarks that of all loafers the railroad station loafer is the most loafsierish. He is noisy, obtrusive, insolent. He kicks your value as he passes it. He sits down, and compels the passenger, the patron of the railroad, to stand up. He is never without a mouthful of tobacco, and he always expatiates in the direction either of your value or your feet. He stands in your way at the ticket office, although he is never known to go anywhere. He looks over your shoulder at the telegraph window while you write a message. He spars and "rattles" with other hoodlums. He loudly calls the attention of his fellow-loafers to your personal appearance, and makes side remarks for you to hear as you pass by him. He is utterly useless, infinitely worthless and a wholesome nuisance. When he is under 14 years of age he should be flogged and expelled to go to school; between the years of 14 and 21 he should be sent to the house of correction or a Reform school and after reaching the age of 21 he should be hanged. Off with his head. So much for the loafer.

The following good—well call it a little episode took place in the Lower House of Legislature last Wednesday: "Sponsor, of Perry, wound up a glowing speech in the House this morning with the quotation, 'Vox populi, vox dei,' and sat down perspiring. Mackin turned to Crawford, who is a butcher at home, and remarked, enthusiastically: 'Wasn't that a grand climax, now?'" "It was the real stuff," assented the other Philadelphia.

"I'll bet you ten dollars you don't know what it means, though," said Mackin. "I'll just go you," said Crawford, eagerly. "Everybody knows it means 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?'" "Here's the tenner," said Mackin, admiringly, handing it over: "I had no idea you were such a Latin scholar."

The richest part of it, all, is that Mackin believed that Crawford had translated the quotation and paid the ten dollars under that belief.

William Rika opens a subscription school in town this week. Mr. Rika is a good teacher, and quite an intelligent young man. Jacob Schlegel a citizen from Salem, states that while he was on his way to town last Monday morning he passed through a shower of hail.

David Fegelman, a youth who lives in Walker township brought 3 living young foxes to town on Saturday evening. He dug them out of a hole on Adams' ridge. He had also captured the old fox but she was dead when he exhibited the animals. On Friday afternoon a match game of ball was played in Patterson, between an Atry View Academy club and Mifflin Academy club. The Atry View boys scored 54. The Mifflin boys scored 34.

Consult the time table as published in these columns for the change of time for running of Passenger trains on the railroad. Trains began to run on the new time on Sunday. The Meadville Republican of May 11 says, several farmers in Erie county are plowing their wheat fields and will plant other crops therein, fearing that the prospects for wheat are hopeless. We have not heard of any such action among Crawford county farmers.

The Biographer is a New York publication issued from No. 23 Park Row. Price 25c for single copy; $2.50 per year. It is an illustrated work, and the number that lies on our table contains 64 portraits of eminent persons, with a short reliable sketch of the life of the individual that has been pictured in the book. The Biographer will become a welcome visitor where ever it is introduced.

The Chambersburg Public Opinion says, the annual income of Col. McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, is $34,000. His salary is $12,000, and the difference between that and the $24,000 is made up of dividends from the paper. Mrs. McClure owns 555 shares in her own right, out of the 2,000 shares of the establishment.

The National Agricultural Department sent Dr. Atkinson a heavy installment of seeds of different kinds. A recent writer observes a great difference between the ways of the American and the Chinaman as follows: We shake hands as a salutation; a Chinaman shakes hands with himself. He stands at a distance, and clasping his hands, shakes them out and down at you.

We uncover the head as a mark of respect; they keep their heads covered, but take off their shoes for politeness. We shave the face; they shave the head and eyebrows. We cut our finger nails close; they consider it aristocratic to have nails from three to five inches long, and which they are obliged to protect in silver cages.

The Chinaman's waistcoat is outside his coat, and wears his drawers outside his pants. We blacken our shoes; he whitens them. We have soup as a first course at dinner and dessert at last; they have dessert at first, and soup to wind up on.

We want our wines ice cold; the Chinese drink theirs scalding hot. We bury in the earth; their dead are kept on the surface. We draw our water from a well; they draw it from a cistern. We wear mourning with the white garments indicate the loss of friend. In that land of opposites "the man who flies kites, walks on his heels and plays shuttlecock"; and to keep up their cussidoo, as they play the latter with their feet instead of their hands.

We use a soft pillow; they a block of wood. They launch their ships sidewise, ring their bells from the outside, and actually turn their screws in the opposite direction from ours. An attractive, youthful appearance secured by using Parker's Hair Balsam to which are getting gray.

Communication Editor Sentinel and Republican—Sir, permit me through the columns of your paper, to write a few lines, expressive of the loss of my dear father, who passed away upon the death of one who knew him (R. N. Hayes). His death, so unexpected, caused many stout hearts to melt and weep. He was one of excellent moral character, and our sorrow that we shall see his face no more. Resolved, That we lovingly bow to the will of Him who doth all things well. Resolved, That in the death of our schoolmate the school has lost one of its brightest pupils, the Parents an obedient son.

Whereas God has permitted death to enter our School and taken from our midst, our beloved schoolmate, Robert N. Hayes, therefore, we give these expressions of our appreciation of his worth, and our sorrow that we shall see his face no more.

Resolved, That we lovingly bow to the will of Him who doth all things well. Resolved, That in the death of our schoolmate the school has lost one of its brightest pupils, the Parents an obedient son. Resolved, That we extend to the afflicted family, and friends our sympathies, and direct them to God the only true source of comfort.

Although Solomon told us, nearly 2000 years ago, that "There is no new thing under the sun," it is a well established fact that some startling discoveries have recently been made in the sun.

Men have always had some vague idea of its power, but of its other might agencies and influences they were largely ignorant. It is a subject as fascinating as it is instructive and it is worthy of our earnest attention, especially when so admirable a work as "The Celestial Symbol Interpreted," (advertised in another column, published by J. C. McCurdy & Co., Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis,) is within the reach of every one.

The learning author not only acquaints us with, and makes plain the newest scientific discoveries, but he also teaches, at every step, some great normal truth. Let us be accused of undue enthusiasm in speaking of this book, we take the liberty of quoting the opinion of the able and critical N. Y. Observer: "This work has been carefully examined by eminent, learning and orthodox divines, who unite in testifying to its great beauty, usefulness and truth. To some, the analogies may appear strained, yet they are not more so than the figurative language of the Bible itself warrants, and the illustrations are fitted to exalt our conceptions of the glory of God in nature, and especially as it is seen in the brightest of all His works. The reader finds the evidences of God's power and goodness constantly reflected from the Sun in 3 pages, and is led from admiration up to that adoration which becomes the vision contemplating His Divine Maker."
