"Then how should I proceed ?" was asked good-humoredly.

"It depends on whether you merely wish to hear the message or whether you want to intercept it and send anlabor. "What's the circuit ?" said the reporter, "The circuit is the course pursu by the current over the wire to its des tination and back through the ground to the place it came from. In the early days of the science it was thought necessary to maintain it by a wire back to the starting point. Since then we have discovered that the current will pass back through the ground, like a homing pigeon through the air. To resume, in order to merely overhear the message it is necessary to make a loop or V running from the wire to the in strument of the tapper and then back
