THE RIVER OF TIME.

Broad, and deep and swift the current Of time's rushing tide, Bearing on through sun and shadow,

O the days when light was brightest,

With a joy untold! How their saddened memories only In our hearts we hold.

Hearts that loved us, hopes that cheered

Voices dear and sweet, Thoughts that perished like the flowers 'Neath our treading feet, Through our tears we see them drifting

As the season's glide, Face of friend and foe and lover,

On its bosom wide.

Dear, lost days of old! O the love that thrilled our pulses

With the river's beat.

O our Father, when the passion

Of this life is o'er, When the river bears us onward To the farther shore, May we hear again the voices We have loved of yore!

May we find the flowers that withered

At an earthly shrine, Blossoning again, O Father, At thy touch divine, Where our lives meet full fruition

In that home of thine!

Where deep harmonies forever

kettle over the fire for tea.

O'er the spirit roll, Where the mocking past shall never Vex the weary soul, and the tired ones loose their burdens At the heavenly goal.
