"Her Second Love," and the Important Secret She Reveals for the Benefit of Women.

(New York World.) Several years ago the American public were aroused by the entree upon the stage of a httle lady who had been previously from her own talents, to cause recognition. public which she has continued to hold ever since. When it was ann junced therefore, that Miss Maude Granger would star the coming season in the play "Her Second Love," written by Mr. John A. Stevens, it was only natural that unusual interest should be manifested not only in theatrical circles, but in other branches of the community. This was specially the case, as it was known that Miss Granger had. for the past year, been in exceedingly delicate health, and the determination to star in a strong emotional play was the more surprising. One of the staff of this paper was accordingly deputized to see the popular lady and verify the rumor or announc its incorrectness.

Miss Granger's countenance is familiar to nearly every one in the United States. It is a face once seen never to be forgotten. Features remarkable in their outline and contour are surmounted by a pair of large and deep eyes indicative of the greatest soul power. It is easy to see where Miss Granger obtains the ability to portray characters of the most emotional nature. She possesses within herself the elements of feeling without which no emotion can be conveyed to an audience. The man of news found the lady at her home in this city and was accorded a quiet welcome. It was evident at once that she was in greatly improved health, which the expression and color of her countenance both

"Is it true Miss Granger that you contemplate a starring tour the coming season?' "Yes, indeed. My season begins in Chicago on the 16th of July. From there I go to San Francisco and then play the remainder of the season through the eastern and western states."

"Are you confident your health will permit such an undertaking?" A ringing laugh was the first reply to this question, after which she said: "Certainly. It is true I have been ill for the past two years, but now I am wholly recovered. Few people can have any idea of the strain a conscientious actress undergoes in essaying an emotional part. It is secessary to put one's whole soul into the work in order to rightly portray the character. This necessitates an utter abandonment of one's personality and an assumption of the character portrayed. If this is an emotional part it is necessary to feel the same emotions the part is supposed to feel. For more than a year I actually cried each night in certain passages of a part I was playing. The audience considered it art. Probably it was, But do you anticipate avoiding this in

"You must be aware that women by their very natures are subject to troubles | ted. and afflictions unknown to the sterner sex. As might be supposed, there is The name of these troubles is legion, but in whatever form they may come they are weaknesses which interfere with every ambition and hope in life. I believe thousands of nable women are to day suffering its benefits. Preparations are now being agonies of which even their best friends and relatives know little or nothing, and when I reflect upon it I confess it makes me sad. Now all this misery arises from an ignorance of the laws of life or a neglect to carefully observe them. "Well, I have found a remedy which seems specia ly adapted for this very purpose. It is pure and palatable and controls the health and life as, I believe, nothing else will. It is really invaluable and if all the women in America were to use it I am quite sure most of the suffering and many deaths might be avoided." "What is this wonderful remedy?"

In Livermore Pass, Alameda County, on the cld road from Haywards and Sar Jose to Stockton, about twenty miles southeast of Mount Diably, stands the Mountain House. The region round about has a celebrity as having been the rendezvous of a gang of Mexican desperadoes of the worst stamp. Its proprie ter, Mr. Zummerman, a veteran of but little announced. She was one of an Mexican war, is well known by all the innumerable number of aspirants for public pioneers and travelers of that section, among whom his linguistic abilities and his skill as a raconteur have rendered In spite of this fact, however, she quickly him a general favorite. But circumstances have made him the possessor of a secret which surpasses any of his tales of foreign travel, and which is likely to prove a bonanza to him. Within a comparatively recent date an artesian well was sunk upon his grounds, with a resuit to challenge amezement. The water was desired for irrigating purposes, and one morning, after all the work about it had been completed, Mr. Zimmerman went out to survey this new addition to his property. He observed that through the carelessness of some one the water had been permitted to run during the night. Highly indignant at the sight of so much water being wasted by negligent workmen, he gazed upon a pool of it near the overflowing trough with growing rage. In the pool of water the trate eyes of Mr. Zimmerman detected several large potatoes lying where they had been dropped on the way to the kitchen. Naturally of a provident disposition, this discovery increased his disgust for the wastefulness of his employees, and, stooping down, he gathered the scattered vegetables into his hand. By an involuntary im-Julse he attempted to press off one of the "spud's" eyes,

It was impossible to do so, and on examining it more closely Mr. Zimmerman at once saw that a radical change in the nature of the potato had taken place. It could no longer be classified with the vegetable, but with the mineral kingdom. The potato in fact, all the potatoes he had picked out of the pool, were completely petrified, but quite unlike the potatoes petrified through being carried in the pockets of rheumatic people; each one retained its size and outward appearance. When broken in bits by the repeated blows of a heavy axe they exhibited a stony fracture similar in looks to that of fossil wood. Thereupon, as a natural result of this discovery, followed a series of interesting experiments, each of which strength ned the feeling of thankfulness m Mr. Zimmerman's breast that he had not used the well water for drinking purposes; also that the discovery had been made in time to prevent the de struction of his garden and orchard by irrigation with this peculiar fluid. As a preliminary to this experiment he built an air-tight structure of one room. Within this was a zinc tub, connected with pipes leading from the well. In this receptacle have been placed small but those were none the less real tears and fowls, dogs, and cats. These animals,

The knowledge of this fact having come to some of the local undertakers, it is understood that they are about to take vigorous measures for the overthrow of this peculiar company. But those who have visited the spot and witnessed the experiment are confident that the project is feasible. If it be so, the vexed question of burial, with its attendant troubles of cemeteries and deleterious gases, will be settled at once and forever. Its convenience and inexpensiveness will place it far ahead of eremation which is predicted to be the ultimate fate of generations to come. Embalm-

About Sweet Peas.—What is more beautiful or more fragrant than the old-fashioned Sweet Peas! How rarely we see them of late. It is true that the same thing—the intense summer heat—which makes our season of "green peas" rather short, also interferes with the sweet pea. Those who would have sweet peas should plant them early, and plant them deep. Three inches of covering is none too much, and they should be put in as early as the soil is in a condition to work. Reasons Why You Feel Badly.

Because your stomach is not doing its work properly. Because your liver is out of order, and wants righting Because your blood is thin, and needs iron in it. Because you are troubled with nervous aches and pains. Because you are vexed with languor and debility,
All these Reasons Can be Set Aside by the Use of Brown's Iron Bitters, which will Tone up your enfeebled stomach, and help it to digest.

Refresh your wearied liver and put it in splendid order. Enrich your watery blood, and give it a rich red color.

Calm your worried nerves, and give them restful peace. Strengthen your whole system and drive debility and languor out. Considering that any man who has a dollar may buy of the nearest druggist a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, there is no reason why people should continue to feel badly, just for the fun of it
