About 10.30 o'clock a lone horse man was seen riding into town. He rode completely around the Court Mouse and iail and seemed to be taking a survey of things, after which he rode away again. Two or three people who happened to be on the street saw it was rather a curious action, but the idea that he was a scout for a party of lynchers never seems to have suggested itself until dred masked men rode into town .-They hitched their horses, posted guards to warn away citizens and went to the east door of the jail, where they soon found an entrance by breaking down the door with sledges. Then they quietly but with great determination proceeded to break the iron doors leading to the orrodors. This took some timehalf an hour. Finally, however, the doors gave way under their sturdy strokes. Nelling heard the gratings give way and well knew the purpose of the mob. He dressed himself and. when the last cell door was forced.
