Well educated cooks understand this, and use a deeper vessel than our common tryingpan, charge this with a quantity of fat sufficient to cover the fish, which is simply laid upon a wire support, or frying basket, and left in the hot fat until the browning of its surface, or of the flour or bread crambs with which it is coated indicates the sufficiency of the cookery. At first sight this appears extravagant, as compared with the dreaming of the real cause, soon after left the car. If any South Side wife has this week found any dainty lace handkerchief about her husband's clothes she need not be jealous-it was only a case of mistaken idenity.
