"I am very sorry I cannot accomodate you," said the hostess: "but everything we have in the house has been bespoke by a gentleman who arrived a few minutes before you."

"Go up stairs," said the traveler,
"and tell your guest I shall be obliged to him if he will permit me to share his dinner and I will defray my portion of the expense.'

The hostess delivered the message to the first traveler, who politely replied: "Tell the gentleman I shall be glad of his company, but that it is not my practice to accept payment from persons shom I invite to dine with me. The second traveler accordingly went up stairs, and having expressed his acknowledgments for the kind reception he had received, they both sat down to the table. The dinner was as cheerful as could be expected, considering the short ac-quaintance of the parties; but during the desert, when some excellent wine was placed before them, the conversation became more unrestrained, and the second traveler ventured to ask his obliging Amphitryon what had brought him into that part of the country, where he appeared to be a stranger. "I have been ordered here," he re plied, "by the cardinal,"

"By the cardinal!" resumed his companion. "Pardon my curiosity, sir, if I inquire whether you have given his eminence any offence?"

"By no means," replied the first traveler; and it is only to free myself from any such imputation that I have come here. The fact is, there has been published at Rochelle, my native town, virtulent satire upon the public conduct and personal character of the cardinal, several copies of which have been addressed to the king, and though I never wrote a single word that has appeared in print, I am unjustly accused of being the author of this pampitlet. Nothing obtains such ready belief as the whisperings of folly and Di-nature, and I have therefore lost no time in obeying the summons of his eminence in the hope of effectually refuting the charge that has been brought against me.

"Sir," said his companion, with an expression of marked anxiety, "return thanks to kind Providence for the fortunate incident that introduced you to me to-day. I have also been summoned hither by the cardinal, and for no other purpose I am convinced than that of beheading you."

A thrill of horror passed through the the frame of the person to whom these words were addressed.

'Yes, sir," resumed the speaker, "my task would have been to behead you. I am the executioner of a neighboring town, and whenever the cardinal has any secret act of vengeance to perform, I receive orders to repair to the castle. The particulars I have just heard you relate, together with the hour of your appointment here, all convince me beyond doubt that you are marked out as a victim. But fear nothing, I will secure your escape. Orter your horse instantly, and go with

The horror and alarm of the poor than described. He instantly ordered the horse to be saddled, and having paid the bill he and his companion set out, taking a private road through the wood of Bertrand.

"Do you see," said the guide, as they approached the castle, "that grated window, which almost reaches the crannies of the central turret? In that dungeon sentences against which there is no appeal are pronounced and execu ted, and the mutilated bodies hurled down into the most below, where they are speedily destroyed by quicklime, Neglect not to observe my instructions, nceal yourself behind that hedge, and if within the space of an hour you see a light glimmering at the window which I have pointed out, then you may conclude that I am ordered here to execute vengeance upon another; but if, on the contrary, you see no light, rely on it you yourself are the intended victim. In that case, lose not an in tant. Profit by the darkness of the night and the swiftness of your horse. Gain the trontier, and there plead your cause as you see fit; but permit me to tell you that it is absurd to justify yourself against the imputation | the hand until there is no danger of the of an offence which you have not committed; for, where despotism reigns, truth and Justice are powerless."

Having expressed unbounded gratiwithdrew to his hiding place. The suspicions of the cardinal's agent proved well founded. No light appeared at the window of the turret, and at the expiration of an hour the traveler galloped off. He immediately quitted France, and did not venture back until after the death of the cardinal.

On returning to his native country, his first business was to visit the inn of Rouelle, and to make inquiries respecting his benefactor, who, however, had not been heard of for several years. He then related his adventure, which became a local tradition, and has conferred celebrity on the inn of Rouelle, known by the sign of the "White Horse," The room in which the two travelers dined is shown to this day, and is called the "Room of the Good world-except, perhaps, Eastern Australia-where coal is so extensively developed as in Borneo. Thick seams cropout in innumerable places on the coast and on the banks of the rivers. At some of the streams of North Borneo he has seen water-worn and rounded fragments of coal forming the entire shingle bed of the channel. In some places, again there are outcrops with seams of good coal twenty-six feet thick. The coal formation is the one prevailing rock of the coast. It forms the principal outcrop about Sarawak. At Labuan, also, no other rock can be seen. Lining the banks of the Bruni river he saw only picturesque hills of very old carboniferous shale. & Bark Catte, Canada

A bark cance is only one man's load; his shoulder, his coat hanging on his arm, perspiration pouring down his face, was asked by a gentleman near the Polo grounds, recently, how the game came out.

A bark cance is only one man's load, he turns it upside down, and walks with it on his head. A man toiling across a portage in this attitude is a somewhat grotesque sight, suggesting a game came out. "Fo'ty-seven ter fifty-six," said the cance will go over shallows where anything else would stick, and as for harthing else would stick, and as boy.

"The deuce you say!" exciaimed the diness, an expert canoeman will almost diness, an expert canoeman will almost gentleman, very much astonished; turn it around with one twist of the paddle. Repairs are frequent but simpaddle. Repairs are frequent but simple, consisting mainly in the free application to damaged places of a resinous gum kept in store for that purpose.

Speed is a secondary consideration you cannot go fast paddling up, and you cannot help going fast coming We came down a reach in half an hour that we had taken half a day to work up. Often towing and poling have to be resorted to to make way against a heavy current. Paddling, though a more wasteful application of muscular work than rowing, is less fatiguing when the pace is not forced, and after a little practice becomes a very delecta-ble exercise. The traveler embarked on a canoe voyage has to carry most things with him. Along the river there are only scattered farm houses, and the only certain and comfortable way of securing shelter for the night is to camp out. The tents and other necessaries form the cargo of the canoes.

It is astonishing how much stuff can be stowed away in a canoe that looks quite small-another merit of the savage birch-bark vessel as compared with European boats. Every night we choose our camping ground, pitch our tents, and make our camp fire; this last that I ain't never seen, and I though I tents, and make our camp fire; this last might come upon him some time by jist is of great importance, not only for warmth and brightness, but for driving away insects, the only drawback in a life otherwise perfect. The nobility keep is nothing. In many places, indeed, away from town; all the hotels are los- the best fuel is drift-wood which could in no way be .made otherwise useful. Even in summer nights the fire is a welcome companion, and after a day's work at paddling hot tea is the best of drinks whatever the temperature may be-not that other drink would be easy to get if one wanted it, but no such want is felt.
