Rev.Philip Graif's Lecture,

Regardless of the flerce cold wind that prevailed on the evening of the 2nd inst., a large audience assembled in the Court House to listen to Rev. Philip Graif's lecture, "Ocean Trip and Paris." An accomplished orchestra, of amateur musicians, of Mifflintown talent, treated the audience to a number of pleasant pieces of music as a prelude to the lecture. Few people in the audience had seen the ocean, fewer had sailed upon it, and fewer still, had seen Paris. To such an audience the lecture must needs have been a treat,

The lecturer led the audience from Baltimore across the Atlantic by one of the fine steamers that ply between the Old and New worlds. His description of life on board of the steamer, ranged from the meals, to the log book and the captain, to the flirtation and wooings of lovers, bachelors and maidens, through the watches of the night, and phosphorescent flashes of the sea, to phantom figures in the rigging, and did not ever miss the contributions of the sea-sick to old ocean. England only received a hurried salutation, as the lecturer stepped ried salutation, as the lecturer stepped ashore and whirled across the Island to the English channel on his way to the home of the Frenchman. Graif was not the only of the Frenchman. Graif was not the only one on board, that was on the look-out for sylvania, entitled "An Act to provide for the first sight of the coast line of France the Incorporation and Regulation of certain and his delineation of the manifestation of the little lady, who was so wrought upon by the first sight of land that she energetically shouted, La Belle, France, was so ar-tiscally drawn in manner and tone of voice,
