GENERAL GRANT'S history has realized over $400,000 for Mrs. Grant.

The warm weather and the flies induce Congress to move for an adjournment.

It is reported that the Indian Territory has not had a "soaking rain" within the past thirteen months.

Europeans are reported to be in trouble with each other on account of the violation of treaty obligations.

State tickets were put in the field by prohibitionists in Ohio, Wisconsin, Connecticut, and Michigan last week.

BOULANGER is the name of the new Minister of War for France who is talking of causing a war between France and Germany.

Brer of the Philadelphia Times contradicts the reports of General Grant's eldest daughter—Mrs. Sartoris—being unhappily married.

The Greenback Labor Party and the Republican Party of Schuylkill county seem disposed to fuse to defeat the nominees of the Democratic Party.

It is estimated now that the peach crop of New Jersey will come forward with 3,000,000 baskets of peaches for the markets.

The days of the Cleveland administration are almost half over, and where? Oh! where? It is asked are the good times that were promised by his friends before the election.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S sister taking to literature has aroused the ambition of sisters and daughters, and in some instances the wives of politicians at Washington, to take to writing.

The Cleveland administration seems to be in the hands of the Gold Buds. If they win the elections in the two years to come the country has not yet gone half way to the bottom of hard times.

The cashier of the American Baptist Publication Society of Philadelphia, stole about $30,000 of the money of the association. He was a conspicuous church member and a splendid Sunday school worker.

De Lesseps, the French engineer tells the Panama Canal company that the canal across the isthmus will be finished in 1889, which will be the year in which Blaine will be inaugurated President of the United States.

The sixteen-year old daughter of a Presbyterian preacher and the son of a Jewish clothier in Jacksonville, Ill., ran away one day last week and were married, all of which caused a stir among the Jews and Gentiles of that town.

The influence of the Cleveland administration has been against silver as a circulating medium of exchange. If his gold bug friends had their way silver would be riled out as money, and after that, times harder than this generation ever dreamed of would set in.

CLEVELAND has ordered that office holders, that is, postmasters and so forth, shall not take a part in the primary elections. According to past Democratic doctrine, what a postmaster for the unfriendly and bring them up to the work on election days?

The biggest colored wedding ever witnessed in Louisiana, took place on the 28th day of July, between Miss Eladie Allain and Patmesston Laundry. Special trains, bands of music, many guests, masses of natural flowers, and a profusion of Chinese lanterns among the trees distinguished it from the common wedding.

A man named J. P. Connelly was arrested near Johnstown, N. J., last week on the charge of passing counterfeit silver dollars. His apparent business was to go about the country selling cloth goods. When the purchaser would give him a five or a ten dollar bill in payment for goods, he would change the paper money and always give the counterfeit money in change.

The gold bugs in the commercial centers have conspired to demonize silver. There is one way by which the people of the United States can avert the financial calamity that the ruling out of silver would entail, and that is to be certain to send no gold bugs to Congress. To be certain to send only such Congressmen to Washington that will vote for the Washington that will vote for a double standard, that is for both gold and silver as a medium of exchange.

Last week it was proven in court in Chicago that Spies, one of the leaders of the Anarchists lit the match that fired the bomb that killed so many of the police in Chicago, when they were trying to quell the communitist riot. It is worse than folly to huddle over such men as Spies and his followers in Court. It is a crime to society generally to waste time and the Chicago murderous crowd, and the Chicago courtes do themselves in justice and bring the laws for the preservation of order, and protection of life and property into contempt by witholding speedy justice and execution.

On the evening of the 27th day of July, twelve or fifteen women of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Millerstown, Butler county, met Peter A. Rattington, editor of the Herald, of the place mentioned, as he came out of the post office and belabored him with whips for having published something uncomplimentary about them while they were off to a picnic. To his credit be it said, he did not strike any one of the fair sex that were belaboring him. He might have done better if he had hastily put his arms around each one and given her a buss and then taken leg bail for the balance. Doubtless he deserved all of the whipping he received.

The West Virginia Republicans last week recognizing the fact that a large number of radical temperance people would like to have the temperance question settled by a vote of the people, instead of having it a bone of contention continually, proposed to submit the Prohibitory amendment to the people at the polls, just what the Republicans of Pennsylvania propose to do. The Republican party in this State will elect the next Legislature and will propose a prohibitory amendment that the people will settle at the polls for or against the manufacture of intoxicating drink.

There is no dodge about the Republican platform proposal to submit the liquor question to a vote of the people. It is the only way to settle a great question. If the people vote the proposed temperance amendment down there is an end of it and the liquor traffic will be subject to government under the law as at the present time. If the prohibitionists expect to carry the State for a prohibitory amendment, they had better quit fooling with the nomination of temperance candidates for office, and go to work to secure a public sentiment that will bring them voters when the amendments are to be voted for or against. What they'll need will be voters on the question. They will need to have the people, that is, the voters, educated up to the belief that they no longer shall make currant, elderberry, and blackberry wines and so forth, and not drink strong cider. If they can get the people to drop the manufacture of such wines their way is clear to the securing of an amendment to the State Constitution to abolish the manufacture and sale of alcoholic drinks, but such a sentiment can't be manufactured by running men for office.

Love Saves the Indians

There is a young lady in Carson who is reported to be the greatest beauty on the Pacific coast—or any other coast, for that matter. She has a lover, a Lieutenant in the army, who is very devoted to her. He is down in Arizona fighting Apaches. Three times a day—morning, noon and night—she writes him a 12 page letter, and once a day she sends him a long telegraphic dispatch, to all of which he responds in like manner—Carson Index. This accounts for the inability of the troops to catch up with the Apaches. The Lieutenant is probably heading the pursuit of the hostiles. But, of course, his letter writing occasions some delay—Sacramento Bee.

A Kentucky Snake Eater.

A correspondent writing from Lexington to the Cincinnati Commercial says: Mr. G. F. McMeen, of this city, at time connected with the Kentucky Stock Farm, has quite a local reputation as a eater. I had a long talk with him, and he says he has eaten along the whole line of dishes—American, English, German, French, and Italian. He appreciates oysters in all their forms, chickens and tender forelegs, and when real hungry can tackle cornbread, sowbely. But for a dish that will make the gods smack their lips in genuine satisfaction, give him fat black snakes fried in butter and lard, or better in snail oil. When snakes are in season he eats them every few days. He also classes snails among his list of delicacies. These he cooks with macaroni. "When did you first commence eating snakes?" asked the reporter. "In 1858 I was in California among the Indians. They ate snakes, generally black and rattlesnakes. I once tasted a piece of the latter which had been cooked. I did not then like the idea of eating snakes. This repugnance I found was only an idea, there being no reason for it. I came home to Franklin county, Ky., in 1859. While on my father's house, I saw an old Irish hermit, who had resided there many years, kill a black snake. He complete hardening of the concrete, after which time heavy traffic began without apparent injury to the structure.

OAKLAND, Ill., July 29.—While gathering berries, with several other ladies, near this city yesterday, Mrs. J. Hansen was called by the attention of her companions, who went to her assistance. She was placed in a wagon and started for her home, but before she arrived she died. Her left limb, which was bitten, swelled to enormous proportions before death ensued.

At Norridgewock, Maine, two years ago, Daniel Davis, who is a blacksmith and minister, in obtaining for his octogenarian mother a pension, as the widow of an 1812 soldier, made affidavit that she had never married again. It was discovered last Friday that she had married twice, and that one of the marriages had been solemnized by her son. Davis was arrested on Monday but escaped from custody.

The other day, while a Boston gentleman, with his wife and little daughter, was fishing from a boat near Bridgeport light-house, the little girl fell overboard. She was in danger of drowning, when a big Newfoundland dog, belonging to Keeper McNeil, leaped from the veranda of the light-house, swam to the child, caught her dress in his mouth and swam back with her to the light-house, where she was pulled out of the water.

A hail storm of great severity visited the western part of Wyoming, county, near Jersey Shore, last Thursday. Hail fell in great quantities, many of the stones being as large as hen's eggs. Buildings were badly damaged and corn and other crops in the path of the storm wholly destroyed. The barn of George and Henry Shafer was struck by lightning and destroyed, with over three hundred bushels of wheat and a lot of other grain. The storm did not cover a wide territory.

A Perry county man raised a potato vine that measured seven feet four inches long, but as no mention is made of the potatoes, it is presumed that they were less than a half bushel in size.

"I can't be in—help it," she sobbed; "we just passed the office of the company that John had his life insured in, 'an when I think o' that poor man's thoughtfulness, I just feel 'ave got to cry."—Puck.

The pretty maiden fell overboard and her lover leaned over the side of the boat as she rose to the surface and said:

"Give me your hand!" "Please ask papa," she said, as she sank for the second time.—Boston Courier.

The greatest storm in 30 years struck Lewisburg, Union county, about 5 o'clock, on last Thursday afternoon. It came from the northeast, and was accompanied by shuttles on the storm side of houses. The corn and oats were greatly damaged. On the same day about 4 o'clock, a great storm did great damage to property and corn at Greenville, Pa. Hail as large as walnut fell. A circus tent was blown down and a number of people were injured.

The following verse was written by the editor of the Fulton Republican after being inspired by noticing the swine perambulating the streets and alleys of his native town, McDonoughsburg:

Oh hog, the beautiful hog,
Curing his tail as he watches the dog,
Dreying no law for his breed and meat,
As he roams around from street to street;

Hooting and grunting and nosing around,
Till the open gate is sure to be found,
By the broken hinges and rained quiete,
By the lovers hanging 'til Sunday night,
It won't stay here it won't stay level,
It walks the hog and raises the devil.

The Postmaster-general has, in compliance with petitions signed by large numbers of business men in numerous cities, amended the postal laws and regulations so as to permit the transmission through the mails, within the United States and territories, of liquids not liable to explosion or spontaneous combustion or ignition by shock or jar, and not inflammable, soft soap pastes or confections, ointments salves and articles of similar consistency under certain conditions insuring safety to other small matter in transmission.

The occupation of each President from Washington to Cleveland at the time of their election to office, reads briefly thus: Washington was a soldier, Adams a lawyer, Madison a lawyer, Monroe a lawyer, Adams a lawyer, Jackson a soldier, Van Buren a lawyer, Harrison a soldier, Tyler a lawyer, Polk a lawyer, Fillmore a lawyer, Pierce a lawyer, Buchanan a lawyer, Johnson a politician, Grant a soldier, Hayes a lawyer, Garfield a lawyer, Arthur a lawyer, Cleveland a lawyer.

The Canada Thistle.

The extermination of the Canada thistle is of such importance that it is claiming the attention of even city journalists. The Philadelphia Times in speaking of it says: The farmers of every community should sternly enforce the law of 24th April, 1885, forbidding all citizens from allowing the Canada thistle to go to seed on their premises.

It is one of the most pestilential weeds of all that now pollute the fields of the farmers, and it spreads with fearful rapidity.

The law of 1885 provides that any person holding lands by lease or otherwise, who shall allow the Canada thistle to go to seed on their premises, shall be fined fifteen dollars to be paid to the school fund of the district. Any citizen who is likely to be injured by the spread of the pest from his neighbor's lands, may give notice to have the weeds cut before going to seed, and if not done the constable or supervisor is required to enter upon the property, cut the weeds and can compel the payment of labor and costs from the holder of the polluted lands. No average farmer or good citizen should require official notice from an officer to make him cut the Canada thistle before it ripens its seed. A few hours work at most would cut it on any average farm, and the holder of any land should cut it for his own protection. It is destructive of all crops when it gets rooted in fields, and its downy seeds are watted thicker and thicker to pollute all neighboring lands.

Supervisors of public roads are also required, by the law, to cut the Canadian thistle on or along all roads or unenclosed lands in their districts, and in case of failure, they are liable to a fine of ten dollars, to be recovered for the use of the parties about to be injured by such neglect or refusal. The present is the time to destroy the Canada thistle pest, and every citizen of land should willingly and promptly obey the law.

Liquor Drinking Abroad.

BEAVERY DRINKING AND CONSEQUENT DECREASE, WANT AND MISERY AND CONSEQUENT DECREASE IN SWITZERLAND.

The liquor traffic in the United States is an unmitigated evil against which every influence should be brought to bear, but when it is compared to what it is in some European countries, the Nation may well congratulate itself. In Great Britain drunkenness among all classes goes far beyond what it does here, and especially in woman. I regret that the way in which it is compared to a rare thing is a common seeing along the streets, but it is as seen in the large cities of that country. The evil is, however, fully recognized, and constant efforts are being made to suppress it, and to limit the traffic which makes it possible.

In Switzerland last summer a most curious event occurred bearing upon this subject. An official inquiry was made into the liquor traffic and its results upon the people, prompted by numerous petitions sent up from the various cantons for legislation against the evil. Statistics were given showing that more brandy was consumed per capita in Switzerland than in any other country in Europe, and that this was constantly increasing. Corresponding with this increase, it was also shown, was the growth of mental disease, while want and misery among the people were spreading rapidly.

Strange to say, in the face of all the facts given, the Federal Council, wise and far-seeing as it has proved itself in many directions, absolutely refused even to renew the restrictive legislation. Worse than this, in its report to the Assembly, it boldly defends social drinking in the following words:

"The practice of the social drinking of spirituous liquors brings a cheerful temper into society, effaces the traces of daily labor, opens the heart to other impressions, and is intimately associated with the development of public life. The public house fosters intellectual activity, and is a remedy against misanthropy, egotism, vanity, narrowness of ideas and extravagance of imagination."

It is said that the report took the country by surprise, and it is not strange. There might have been reasons—although in the face of the terrible facts given it is difficult to imagine what they could be—why immediate legislation in that direction would not be thought wise, but to uphold the evil in such an unqualified manner was a matter for shocked astonishment. The only explanation is that a majority of the Council must have had a money interest in the traffic, which no consideration of public good would lead them to imperil. The statement that the public house is a remedy against misanthropy, etc., is such a manifest display of truth as to require no attempt at refutation anywhere. It is only a matter of surprise that the Council would permit such a report to be sent to the Assembly, and that so many months have been allowed to pass by since that time without anything further being heard upon the subject.

The agitation in our country is such as to promise much for the future. The same money-getting influences must be fought against, but the public attention has been too thoroughly aroused to let the matter rest, even though such legislation as the repeal of the Scott law shows the power which has to be met and overcome.—Toledo Blade.
