Adam J. Greer, has been writing "Way-side Sketches" for the Altoona Tribune. If all his sketches are like the one relative to the Millintown Press, they are about as reliable as Adam's religion and morals were when he was a sejourner in this place.

The progress made by the Commission in arranging the details, and the remarkable unanimity with which the different State Governments have responded to invitations to participate in the celebration of the one hundredth birthday of the American Constitution, leaves not the slightest room for doubt that the demonstration will be the largest and most imposing ever held on American soil, barring only the great celebration of 1876.

The military demonstration of the 16th will also be a most interesting and brilliant feature. Fifteen thousand troops of the various States, besides detachments of marines and regulars, will be present and participate in a most striking feature of the parade will be the presence of the Revolutionary soldier side by side with the guardsmen of to-day.

The North Atlantic squadron will anchor in the Delaware for the occasion, and a grand naval pageant will form a part of the spectacular ceremonial of the day.

The principal event of the 17th will be the commemorative exercises to be presided over by the President of the United States, and addressed by a Justice of the Supreme Court. The President and his Cabinet, the representatives of foreign governments and members of the Congress of all the States, and distinguished people from all parts of the land will be present during the celebration. In addition to the events mentioned a large number of other entertainments, public receptions, and special features, will be made up of the day.
