SENTINEL & REPUBLICAN

MIFFLINTOWN.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1888.

B. F. SCHWEIER,

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

It is said the sentence, "You make me tired," is of Egyptian origin, and in that country is used to mean that a divorce is wanted.

GOVERNOR BEAVER, has appointed Judge Alfred Hand, of Lackawanna county, to fill the vacancy on the State Supreme Bench caused by the death of Judge Trunkey.

If dispatches from Ohio are true a gas explosion may take place at Findlay at any time. Perhaps the fire that is to consume the earth is to start at Findlay. Read dispatches in an other column.

SENATOR VOORHEES is speaking in Indiana. He is making a great ado about the laboring man. His solicitude is wasted in the light of the fact that labor is now free and is taking care of itself. The Senator's talk about labor becomes laughable in view of the fact, that 25 years ago he was the earnest advocate of the men who cracked the whip of the slave holder over the back of labor.

A CONGRESS of 500 doctors have been in session in Paris, France, some time. Last week the time was consumed in the discussion of consumption. It was said that one fifth of the people in France die of consumption. Consumption was pronounced contagious. It is mainly kept up in the human family by milk fracking and beef eating. Meat thoroughly cooked and milk thoroughly boiled is free from the germs of the disease.

THE many friends of HON. I. E. ATKINSON, with whom it was a mooted question as to whether he is a candidate for re election need no longer be in doubt, for by reference to the announcement column they may certainly learn that he is again in the hands of his legion of friends for renomination and re-election. He will be re-nominated with scarcely a word of dissent in his native county. He is no stranger to the people of the district. He has been tested in Congress and the man has not been found who can produce an evil charge against him. His speeches have been sound. His conduct has been exemplary, and his voting has met with popular approval. Such a record puts him head and shoulders above the average Congressman. He has been tried by the crucial tests of integrity and ability and has not been found wanting. Without disparagement to other candidates, in counties of the district, Juniata, presents him for re-nomination and re-election fully satisfied that no other man before the people in the 24th Congressional district can poll so large a popular vote as he can at the November election.

Extraordinary Scene at a Funeral.

An extraordinary scene took place at the funeral in Penzance of Thomas Oates, who had drowned himself in consequence, it was said, of an unhappy home. He had lived with his wife and mother in law. Two thousand persons attended the funeral. When the clergyman left the mob threw to hustle the young widow and her mother into the grave. Failing this they stripped the young woman of her widow's dress, bonnet, gloves and wedding ring. A policeman got her into the omnibus at last, and he and three volunteer protectors of the peace saw her safely home. They were followed by a roaring and shouting crowd, the word among whom were women.

Stave Makers Ladies.

NEW YORK, July 27.—A Parkersburg, W. Va., special says: Two ladies, Miss Wood and Viretta Barnes, living near Devonville, just above here, who had heard one evening a rattlesnake, and carefully searched and captured another. The encounter happened about midnight. One of the sisters was in bed in the room, armed with a rifle, and fired killing him. He was shot through the temple. The other sister was awakened, seized a weapon and sprang on the other burglar as he was trying to escape through a window. He was no less active in his fall to the ground with a bullet in his groin. Both burglars were strangers in these parts, but are supposed to be old timers. The two brave ladies are being feasted by the neighbors. They are generally supposed to have a large sum of money in their house.

Poultry Bugs and Plaster Treatments.

In this section, Tonkens County, New York, of country are thousands of acres planted to potatoes, and the potatoe bug becomes more troublesome every year, and so much thus wholesale poisoning is the only practicable way of protecting the crop from complete destruction.

We can get over the ground twice as fast using Paris Green with plaster as with water. Every one uses plaster here, and the smart ones procure their supply in winter, and prepare it for use immediately or on stirring days, as it can be mixed better and more accurately at the barn, and is concealed by all to gain strength by being mixed with Paris green some supply at time before application.

When the vines are small we use a small tub set with wire screen, box tom, and stiff tin handles, which can be made at any tin shop. Larger ones have arms inside which loosen up the plaster by twisting the can around over each hill. With those one man can get over six acres of potatoes in a day and kill every bug, do no damage to the foliage, waste no green by dropping it between the hills, benefit the crop by using plaster enough to pay for all the plaster costs, and grow an enormous crop of clover on the ground the next season. One need not apply when the vines are damp with dew, nor on a perfectly still day, as plaster, at least the kind we have here, will stick to the leaves at any time.

The secret of success is in the thorough mixing of poison and plaster, and putting it on all parts of the hill. It does not require quantity but evenness in application, as the bugs will congregate on parts of vines not touched by plaster. We give the can a quick twist once over each hill which throws plaster in a circle over top of hill. One can go as fast as he can walk and do good work. In experimenting I learned these facts 1. Foliage can be killed with green and water, with purple and water, with London purple and plaster, but never with green and plaster; also by the use of excessive quantities of the poisons. 2. No growth can be secured by planting whole seed, which will give the largest growth of vines, or by enriching the ground, or by constant cultivation, or by early planting that will be any protection whatever against the ravages of the bugs. 3. Apply poison as soon as slugs hatch, but before they scatter to different parts of the hill. 4. One cannot afford to neglect last broods, even after potatoes seem to have completed their growth. A portion left for experiment yielded at the rate of $15 per acre less, which sum would have paid for harvesting the whole crop. 5. The cost of the mixture and labor in applying it is repaid by increased vigor in the plants.—C. E. Chapman, in Country Gentleman.

Free Cloth to-day. What to Morrow?

The fact that a workingman in this country wears a cheap coat the cloth for which was made by cheap labor in some other country, is a fact for him to be thankful for.—Philadelphia Record.

First it was free raw materials, now it is free cloth, and to-morrow it will be free made up garments. Of course with the free trader it is the "whole hog or none." If the workingman is to be thankful for free raw materials, and free cloth made by cheap labor in some other country, he should likewise be thankful, a thousand times more thankful, for the whole free trade suit at once. What is the use of the American workingman "taxing himself paying wages to the members of his own family when he can get the whole suit made by cheap labor in some other country?" American workers at the looms are invited to quit work and spend their idle days in giving thanks that the workingmen of this country are permitted to wear cheap coats, the cloth for which was made by cheap labor in some other country. They might add this song to their thanks.

O happy day! O happy day.
When free trade took our work away.

—North American.

A Great Revival Meeting.

A great revival meeting has been going on in a New York City Church. The meeting of Sunday morning, July 29, last, is described by the New York Sun as follows. Pastor Bowdish had another experience of "the power" in his church on Sunday morning, July 29. It came in a mild form, however, and Dr. Bowdish did not swoon this time. He had risen to preach the sermon, and was making a few preliminary remarks, when utterance failed again.

"Friends," he said, recovering his speech for a few moments, "I am too full of the spirit of God to address you this morning. Though I might recall the words of fifteen sermons appropriate to this occasion, I could not utter them."

Pastor Bowdish sat down without having proceeded so far as the announcement of his text. His emotion was plainly visible, and produced a strong impression upon the large congregation. There was a pause, broken by a mournful cry that was echoed from a dozen pews, and in a few moments a score of more people were weeping, their bodies swaying in contact or agony, according to the varying emotions which actuated them.

Reverend Mr. Harrison came to the front of the pulpit to take pastor Bowdish's place. One man went forward, knelt at the altar, and professed conversion. Another and another followed, until eight had come out of the sobbing throng to seek consolation from Brother Harrison. The reverend said Pastor Bowdish could not speak again that day. "He might have another shock of glory and go over," he added.

The morning service lasted until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. At three o'clock another big congregation assembled. There weren't seats for nearly all who entered the building. Undertaker Merritt was a late comer, and was standing with his wife near the door when Brother Harrison exclaimed:

"Come up, Brother Merritt; we'll find a seat for you here."

"I wouldn't give two cents for it," was the answering shout, "without a seat for my wife, too."

Room was made for both, and as Undertaker Merritt ascended the pulpit he threw his arms around Brother Harrison's neck and imprinted on it a kiss on his cheek.

A good many people shouted "Hallelujah" and a good many more barked. Then Brother Harrison said it was the greatest Sunday in the history of the revival. He spoke regretfully of its probable close to give way to the campmeeting at Sing Sing, which begins next week. He prophesied that the Sing Sing meeting would be one of the most successful ever held. Lots of people up there who had heard of the New York meetings, he said, were going to come out and be converted. They would have come down here, but most of them were hard working people who couldn't get away. He said this seriously but it provoked a smile.

The congregation sang "numberless as the sands on the shore" over and over again. Every time there was a disposition to stop, a little woman in a distant corners quenched "Glory!" in the shrillest of shrill falsettos until the hymn was taken up again and drowned out the sound of her voice. A big man stood up against a pillar near the little woman, and wept every time she shouted.

This is About Eggs.

A man busily engaged in holding eggs up before a candle attracted the attention of a reporter in Third avenue, near Forty-seventh street, the other evening. An interview was the result, and here it is.

"What are you doing?"

"Candling eggs. You see I pick up each egg and hold it before the candle. The light shines through it. I can see at a glance whether it is cracked or specked or spoiled. If it is cracked I set it aside to be sold at a low price. Bakers and confectioners and some prudent families buy cracked eggs, and they are as good as any eggs not cracked, but they must be used within twenty-four hours."

"Is not that an old-fashioned way of testing eggs?"

"Yes; but experience proves it to be the best, and it is quick. An expert can candle 30,000 eggs a day. It has been tried to test eggs by water. A good egg will sink and a bad egg will float, but you cannot find out a specked egg that way."

"What makes specked eggs?"

"Lying in one position. An egg should not be left many days in one position. If an egg is turned every day it will keep a long time. An experiment was once tried by G. H. Dennis, president of the Duchess County Creamery, as to how long an egg could be kept good. He kept one on his desk nine months, and turned it every day and it kept good."

"How long are the best eggs kept before they get upon the tables of the best hotels?"

"It takes about four days, because they are bought in bulk in the country and must be carefully assorted before being placed on the market."

"How are imported eggs kept from spoiling on the voyage?"

"They are carefully watched and turned. They come in cases easy to handle, and an expert soon learns to handle them quickly. It adds about a quarter of a cent a dozen to the cost, but we can pay that and the freight and yet sell eggs that come from France and Germany cheaper than we can sell western eggs, and some think they are better. We can get them here in about twelve days from France. England also gets many eggs from Germany and France."—N. Y. Evening Sun.

How a Woman Saws.

From the Chronicle-Telegraph.

When a woman her house would decorate,
She stops not at obstacles, small or great;
But the trankest sight that her efforts afford
Is when she performs with a saw on a board.

With her knee on a plank, and the plank on a chair,
She poises her saw with a knowing air;
Makes several dives at the pencilled line,
And is off with a whiz the reverse of fine.

With lips compressed, she bends down to the work,
And crosses the timber with a jerkety-jerk;
She can't keep the line, and her knee slips askew,
But she keeps to her work till the board spits in two.

She has damaged the chair, she has ruined the saw,
Her back is still aching, her hands, too, are raw,
And she finds, when to fit now the plank she tries,
It falls an inch short of the required size.

JOHN SWANSTON.

Millintown, May 26, 1888.

He Just Let Her Hang.

"What does all this mean?" asked Magistrate Gilfeeter yesterday morning when Charles Blaney, a tough and previous dealer at 2502 William street, was called for a hearing.

"He's a brute, so he is," charged his wife, Florence, in response to the inquiry. "We quarrelled this morning, and I went into the store. In sitting down I struck my head against a wood hook which cut it a and my hair became fast so I could not get loose."

"What did he do?"

"He let me hang, and only laughed at me when I begged him to get me away."

"How did you get released?"

"A policeman heard me call for help and came in and took me down."

"This is simply outrageous, Blaney, and I'll bet you a $2000 bail me court."

Charles hustled up the security.—North American.

He was an old man attired in sober black, and had come on to attend the Presbyterian Convention. His blue badge waved gently in the wind, and he had been drawn to the Academy to hear the speeches and take part in the debate. On his way up he stopped in a popular cafe with the intention of purchasing a good cigar. After considerable delay a cigar was selected through the kind offices of the reverend visitor and the attendant at the cigar stand. He lighted it and asked its price. It was a quarter. Was there ever such a price paid for a cigar before? He thought not, and began to expostulate vigorously against such extortion.

In the mean time a prominent lawyer who was standing near and had been taking in the whole scene, approached the cigar stand, and, in a quiet voice, remarked to the attendant, "Robert, give me a cigar—one of the usual kind," at the same time drawing from his pocket a $5 bill. The clerk, who knew the joke, passed out the cigar, took the $5 bill, which he placed in the cash drawer, and turned away.

The country clergyman was dumbfounded. He left the place without a word, and the odds are about ninety to one that some quiet village will be missed in the near future by a powerful sermon on the extravagances of city life. After his departure the lawyer returned and got his change—$4.85.—Philadelphia Times.

GENERAL ITEMS.

"John Sherman earned $1,000 during his first year in the law, and saved $500 of it."

The lemon crop is ripening in Florida earlier than usual, and small shipments have already been made. The yield will be large.

Death from sunstroke is said to be almost unknown in Portland, Oregon, where the recent decease of a citizen from that cause is looked upon as a peculiar occurrence.

MR. SINN, of Royston, Ga., dreamed the other night that he had shot a burglar, and awoke to find that he had shot himself and was minus a finger by the operation.

LANCASTER, Pa., August 1.—On the night of Sunday, July 22, Samuel Longnecker, an 80 year-old Mennonite farmer of Caernarvon township, arose with the rest of the family at midnight to view the eclipse of the moon. He returned to bed, but since then nothing has been seen of him."

A special despatch from Parkersburg, W. Va., says: It is rare indeed to record an elopement on foot, but such a case has just occurred in Jackson county. Miss Hester Tyre, eighteen years, in spite of the opposition of her parents, decided to marry George Fineld, nineteen years. He was a farm hand, and between them they only had $1.25. Last Friday they met by appointment and walked fifty miles to the Ohio river, taking three days for the journey. Crossing the river, a justice united them. The appearance of the groom and that of his blushing bride betrayed their poverty, and the justice declined the piece of silver offered as his fee and gave the happy young woman a blessing, which he sealed with an official kiss, and bade them go, and saw that they were ferried back to West Virginia for nothing. When on this side, after another fifty miles walk, the home of her parents was before them. They footed every step of the way happy in their new relations, and reached the old homestead this morning to find father and mother, who thought their daughter lost, waiting with a blessing and a welcome.
