

THE emigration laws of this country every outflow of Europe that can get away from home comes to the United States.

THE November election will settle the free trade question. The Cleveland Free Trade South party will not carry a northern state.

YELLOW fever has assumed an epidemic form in certain parts of Florida, and all cities people along the coast as far north as New York city are frightened about it.

It is an old story to say the Indians are on the war path now that summer is here, but it is a story that will repeat itself as long as the Indians remain dumb enough to believe that they can drive off the white race.

In the British possession the Indians are on the war path, and the settlers are experiencing the horrors of Indian depredations, just as the people in Tuscarora Valley experienced one hundred and twenty five years ago, in 1763.

DANIEL Z. NOBLES, of Newark, N. J., has organized an expedition to go to Babylon to explore among the ruins of that greatest of all cities. Doubtless from the ruins of Babylon, sooner or later, will be dug a full history of the people of the world before Noah's time, in the uniform system of letters or writing on tablets of stone.

DURING the past 14 months James G. Blaine has been abroad, across the sea. About 7 o'clock on the morning of the 10th inst., he arrived in New York. A grand reception was given him, but the parade of 40,000 men that had awaited him two days before was compelled to take place on the evening of the 9th inst.

It is a nice thing to talk about the universal brotherhood of man, but when the scene is changed and the condition of the people of Europe is contrasted with the people of the United States, the American does not want the universal European way of doing things applied to America, and that is why the Cleveland free trade party will be defeated. The Cleveland free trade party if successful at the polls will rasp the American's means down to the level of the European's way of living.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin: The phrase, "a public office is a public trust," is a very old one. It has been used thousands of times by scrupulous as well as by unscrupulous men in power. It is a trite expression, and whether it is worthy of any particular attention depends entirely on the character of the man who utters it. There is consequently no occasion for hunting up the names of the original authors of it. Mr. Cleveland only repeated in his common places a sentiment that had become a threadbare in the days of Cicero. It is possible, however, that he had some honest intentions when he first expressed it. But as things are now, the proper rendering of it is "public office is a party trust."

The life of a prophet has never been an enviable one, according to the books, and the life of a prophet these days seems to be just as unenviable as in the past, if the treatment of prophet, professor Herr Weissenbauer, at Findley, Ohio is to be taken as an index. The professor was called to Findley to examine and report on the oil and gas prospect of that locality. He reported an abundance of coal oil and gas, and under any amount blow Findley to pieces. That is not the kind of a blow that they desire at Findley, and they did not allow the professor to wait for the fire from below to drive him out, but they blew him out of the community by their hot fiery denunciations.—Exit prophet.

The Honing bar, an institution which has given Pennsylvania authorities some trouble since the High License Law became operative, will probably have its legal status defined by the U. S. Supreme Court. The proprietor of a pleasure steamer plying on the Ohio river was recently sentenced at Pittsburgh for selling liquor on Sunday. The petition to the Supreme Court declares that the State law can have no application to carriers sailing upon the water-ways of the United States and bearing Federal licenses. Should this position be sustained, a vessel running between Philadelphia and Camden, or between this city and Wilmington, or Gloucester, bearing the United States license would be beyond the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, New Jersey or Delaware. The points raised by the attorneys for the Pittsburgh prisoner are curiously interesting and the decision of the Supreme Court will doubtless be awaited with interest.—Bulletin.

AN OLD STORY.

Another Fool Fleece.
CARLEIGH, August 8.—The farmers are still being swindled by the bunco men in Cumberland county. S. M. Rackett, a wealthy farmer living about ten miles from here, was made the victim of three sharpers, who succeeded in fleecing the old man out of $2,000. Tuesday two oily tongued strangers called on Mr. Rackett for the purpose of purchasing his farm. He asked $10,000 for the place, and they left, promising to return the following day to see the ground and crops. Wednesday, Mr. Rackett found them again on his premises. He conducted them over the place and while doing so they were joined by a third party.

He immediately began a conversation and claimed that he was from the city of New York. They then showed him large rolls of money and playing cards and they began playing three card monte. One of the farm purchasers took a hand and won $2,000. They then asked Mr. Rackett to try his luck. He consented and won $1,000. Before leaving Mr. Rackett, they succeeded in fleecing him out of $2,000 and then promised the next day to turn up and buy the farm. This, of course, they have not done.

General Sheridan.

General Sheridan, died on Sunday evening, August 5, 1888, of heart failure at Nonquitt, Massachusetts.

He was born of Irish emigrant parents in Perry county, Ohio, March 8, 1831. Was a West Point Military graduate, and through the war against rebellion in four years he developed into one of the ablest generals of his age. He had the natural instinctive ability that every great military chieftain has to put his command in to action in a manner that brings discomfiture and defeat to his foe. His army was defeated at one time on the Shenandoah Valley when he was away. It was distant at the time about 20 miles. At full speed he rode to the scene of rout, rallied his retreating army and marched back to the jaws of defeat. That victory immortalizes him on his heroic page. His manner of putting his command into action was peculiar. He was and will be the subject of study for the military student of coming generations.

The following is Reed's poem of the General's dashing ride to Winchester from the South at break of day. Belonging to Winchester fresh disney. The adroit air with a shudder bore, Like a herald in haste to the chieftain's door. The terrible grumble and rumble and roar, Telling the battle was on once more, And Sheridan twenty miles away!

And wider still those billows of war, Thundered along the Winchester's bar; And louder yet the victorious roll, The roll of that red was victorious. Making the blood of the listener cold. As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray, And Sheridan twenty miles away!

But there is a road from Winchester town, A good broad highway leading down, And there through the bush of the morning bright, A steed as black as the steeds of night Was seen to pass with eagle flight. As if he knew the terrible need, He stretched away with his utmost speed; His own full gallop had his heart been sped. With Sheridan fifty miles away!

And the landscape sped away behind Like an ocean flying before the wind; And the steed like a bark led with turbine light.

Slept on with his wild eyes full of fire, And with his hearing his heart's desire, He is snuffing the smoke of the burning fire, With Sheridan only five miles away! That that the General saw were the groups of stragglers—and then the retreating troops. What was done—and what to do? A glance told him both; Then crushing his spur with a terrible oath He dashed down the line met a shower of bullets, And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because The sight of the master compelled it to pause. With form and with dust the black charger was gray. He seemed to the whole great army to say "I've brought you Sheridan, all the way From Winchester town to save the day."

"Hurrah, hurrah, for Sheridan!" Hurrah, hurrah, for Union and man! And when the drums are placed on high, Under the dome of Union and man! The American soldier's temple of fame— There with the glorious General's name— He is it in letters both bold and bright,—"Here is the steed that saved the day. By carrying Sheridan into the fight, From Winchester, twenty miles away."— Still sprang from those swift hoofs then, the dust like smoke from the canon's mouth, Or the trail of a comet sweeping faster and faster. Forbidding to traders the doom of disaster. The heart of the steed and the heart of the master. Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls. Impatient to be where the battle-field called. Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play. With Sheridan only ten miles away. Under his spurring feet the road Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed. The remains of the General were taken to Washington D. C. on the 9th of August and placed in St. Matthew's Catholic church till on Saturday when the funeral took place. The funeral took place from St. Matthew's church in Washington D. C. at 10 o'clock A. M. on the 11th.

Just. The funeral rites were performed according to the usages of the Roman Catholic church. By the request of the deceased General's wife the demonstration was kept within the strict limits of dignity and plainness. The hearse was an omnibus and the procession was formed as military funeral processions are formed. The President and Mrs. Cleveland, the Cabinet, the Judiciary, Congressional Committee, Diplomatic Corps and many citizens were in line and went to Arlington Heights where the body of the hero was placed in its last earthly resting place. There was no casket vault in the bottom of the grave. Only a thin pine box was there to receive the cloth covered casket of the great soldier.

To the Republicans of Juniata County.— Having announced myself as a candidate for re-nomination for the position of Representative in Congress, it seems appropriate that I should endeavor to briefly state the reasons that actuate me in again soliciting your suffrages.

I assume that our county is entitled to have a candidate for Congress at the next election. It is my belief that you have again submitted my name for your consideration if the sentiment of the party in our county had seemed to be against me.

I became a candidate because I was urged to do so by many Republicans, and for the further reason that no one else in the county seems to have been encouraged by the members of the party to come out for the office. During my service as your Representative I have supported the great principles to which we as Republicans are pledged. I have endeavored to advance the interests of the people of our district as well as the interests of the nation, and have closely studied the wishes of my constituents, complying with them whenever it was in my power to do so. My time and services have been freely given to all persons who needed my counsel or aid, and the thanks that I have received from many of these persons have been an ample reward for all that I have done for them. I believe that the experience which I have acquired will enable me to serve my constituents more effectively in the future. I should like to be re-nominated and re-elected, I shall as in the past, try to discharge my duties faithfully, and with an eye single to the best interests of our county and our district. I have been placed under obligations to you by the generous and hearty support that I have received at your hands in three successive elections, and I feel deeply grateful to you for it. The confidence that you have reposed in me has imposed the duty on me of showing my constant devotion to the position to which I have been elected, and I have endeavored to discharge this duty to the best of my ability.

Each new expression of your confidence has been another incentive to labor to fulfill your expectations, and I now submit my record for your judgment and approval.

Very respectfully yours,
LOUIS E. ATKINSON
