The Huntingdon Globe says: the public schools already try to teach too many things. Foreign languages may best be left for private study. It is a little more than the schools can do now to teach the pupils to speak English. * * * The Kauffman brothers, of Bradley township, made 21,000 gallons of cider the past apple season.

"This is how a certain Texas judge performs a marriage ceremony: "Do you and each of you solemnly swear that you are in earnest about this business, and that you will stand by each other as husband and wife through thick and thin, sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish?" Next week will be court week. That will be a good time to pay subscription. We have a number of subscribers who are in arrears. Don't wait for a bill. We have a number of subscribers who have paid in advance. Some of them as far ahead is to 1892. May they be blessed, in health, in house, in barn, in field, in store, in office, in all the good things of life.

There is a bill in the Legislature to abolish the poll tax. There is a disposition among meddlesome men who pay no tax to saddle all the burden of taxation on real estate. These men who never save a dollar to invest in real estate upon which a tax may be laid are the loud mouthed fellows for a high valuation. The men who pay nothing in the way of keeping up the State, town and township should be the last to come forward with officious advice.

An exchange says: A bill amending the Marriage License law will be introduced in the House by Representative Hall, of Mercer, permitting either one of the parties about to contract marriage to apply for and secure a license on answering the necessary questions. At present in a number of counties the officials require that both the man and woman must apply in person. This is not the rule in all counties, however, and Mr. Hall desires to make the practice uniform.

From the Liverpool Sun: A man will go west and stay for several years then come on a visit to see his friends and talk and talk about the west in such a manner that his friends think that is the place to go and settle down and make a fortune; but before they get their plans completed to emigrate, the western man generally turns up among his eastern friends and cannot be induced to leave Perry county again. * * * J. C. Grubb, on Monday morning found his horse in a bad condition. The stall showed that the horse had been bleeding considerably through the night. Everything about the stable was marked with blood. The stable door had blood marks as though made by the hand in opening or shutting the door. It looks somewhat as though some malicious person had done the deed; if so, the person or persons would be fit subjects for a visitation of the "White Caps." The horse died on Sunday night.

A few nights ago three individuals attempted to relieve Frederick Lash, who resides on the Shaw place, just beyond town, of possibly whatever they could get their hands upon. Their first visit was to the pantry, which is under the stairway in the hall, and where, by the way, Mr. Lash keeps his meat. A lot of smoked sausage, some bread and a lot of doughnuts were first carried out and placed alongside of the house, where two of the villans remained while the other went back, evidently for a few hams and shoulders, but by this time Mr. Lash was awakened by the intruders, and looking out of his bed-room window saw two men standing at the corner of the house. He concluded to investigate their mission, and in going out of his room into the hall the chap in the pantry rushed passed him, at the same time discharging a pistol. Whether the rascal shot to hit Mr. Lash or only to frighten him of course remains a mystery. At any rate this little affair caused the undesirable visitors to beat a hasty retreat, only taking with them the bread and doughnuts, leaving the sausage behind.—Lewistown Free Press.

A case of indebtedness, Robert McMeen, administrator of Eva Fogleman, deceased, vs. Simon Fogleman, —payment and set off.

Commonwealth vs. Henry Sprecher horse stealing.—It may be here mentioned that the identity of the thief is a good deal talked of. Some few citizens have expressed the belief that Sprecher is not the name of the thief, but that he is a native of Lack township. If Lack township people, when they are in town would call at the jail, they may perhaps, identify the prisoner.

Commonwealth vs. A. W. Opple, Harry Opple, Edward Parsons,—Assault and battery, prosecutor Scott Donaldson.

Cousin Joushs' Letter.

CINNAMONVILLE, PA.

Mr. Editor:—Being an old man, well advanced in years and surrounded by every luxury, a comfortable home with a pleasant mistress affords you may think it strange that I would notice any of the doings of the young people of this present age, and take the trouble of recording a few incidents or mentioning a few facts for the benefit of young men entering society. I was a young man once and can therefore speak from experience, and if I say that the weight of trials and difficulties encountered with the fair sex in single life, is beyond the comprehension of young man's inexperienced mind, I don't think I would be in the extreme. Many an embarrassing mishap happens a young man or he enters society as a beaux or knight of the fair sex. As an illustration quite a lamentable, as well as an embarrassing affair befel one of our first young men of this community. Early in the summer when the trees and plants were putting forth their bright, green foliage and soft summer breezes filled with rich perfume me ramored softly through the trees and bushes, he encountered a beautiful damsel of purity and goodness, that accepted every little attention that he showered upon her with the sweetest smile. And strangest of all her eyes in which sparkled pure, sweet love were following him continually. So by and by his heart was captivated and was finally known as one of the multitude that are termed "in love." So passed the pleasant months until about a year was counted out. Then he began to contemplate deeply on the responsibilities of married life. But still more did he dwell upon the picture of a pleasant home, the beautiful mistress and the bright smiles and fond embraces as she would greet him in the evening after he returned from his day's work, and then lead him to a delicious repast which is made still more tempting by loving hands and bright smiles that help him to every wish. Then after dishes are cleared away and chores all done he could enjoy a quiet tete atets around the fireside chatting over the old courting days. All was was ecstacy and sublime: and as the object of his thoughts entered the village one evening some time ago to attend a gathering, to which he had of course a most cordial invitation,—he watched her every movement with a loving but jealous eye; He trod over the ground she trod as if every thing she touched was divine. The beautiful lines of love that he released for the hundredth time that were to decide his fate that evening, were still ringing sweetly in his ears. He seemed already to hear her shy sweet answer as she hid her blushing face on his shoulder. But horrible night. What was his chargin on entering the brilliantly lighted parlor that evening, to find the ideal of his heart highly entertained by another young knight, and by the sparkle of her eyes he could plainly see that she found his company anything but dull; So as the young knight entertained her company the greatest part of the evening, for she had quite forgotten him,—he could do no more than sit down quietly and listen to the remarks of his loneliness made by his associates at his expense. And then as she capped the climax by quietly disappearing at the close of the evening, she carried the vital spark of love with her, and the light of his heart went out, and sadly and deliberately he dragged his weary body to his father's house to deeply consider the wonderful trial he had gone through and form resolutions to guard himself against the snares that would again be set for him. Now so might many incidents similar to this be related by young men as they go through their courting days. And all the consolation I can give any man is to always be on the alert, watch every movement, and if you have the least suspicion on her part, it would be prudent to retire at safe distance at once. But if the ideal of your thoughts be the true, sincere young lady, you have reason to believe her to be if she does live quite a little from your father's door and you are forced to carry deadly instruments to protect yourself from the scares fixed along the highway, which were perpetrated by some jealous person—I would advise you providing other affairs would be suitable to put the question as soon as the first favorable opportunity presents itself, and then if you are favorable in her sight, settle down and enjoy the sweet companionship of a trustworthy wife through after life.

DECLARATION IN ASSUMPSIT.

JOHN DOE VS. SUSAN ROE.

John Doe complains of Susan Roe
That she, with scheming art,
Has stolen from the said John Doe
His valuable heart.

For this, to wit; that heretofore,
To wit, November nine,
She called the said John Doe an oaf
And styled herself the vine.

And later on the aforesaid day,
With malice all prepense,
The said defendant ate ice cream
At plaintiff's great expense.

And then and there to said John Doe,
Said Susan Roe implied
That she would go in coverture
To to said plaintiff's bride.

And this to do she has refused,
And thus with cruel art
Has stolen from the said John Doe
His valuable heart.

And so he prays this county court,
To do him justice meet;
Likewise for damages he prays,
Therefore he brings his suite.

The Population of Mifflintown and Patterson is about 1600, and we would say at least one half are troubled with some affection of the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all not to neglect the opportunity to call on their druggist and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs.
