SENTINEL & REPUBLICAN

MIFFLINTOWN.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1889.

B. F. SCHWEIER,

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

After the 4th of March all will know who are members of Harrison's cabinet.

Six thousand seven hundred and eighty-two was the number of increase of communicants in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church last year.

The world moves, by proclamation on the 11th of February, the Emperor of Japan proclaimed that the government of Japan had changed from that of a despotic to a constitutional monarchy.

A five story hotel in Hartford, Conn., fell in on the night of the 17th. There were 50 to 100 guests in the hotel many of whom were killed. The wreck of the house is believed to have been caused by the fireman of the elevator engine getting drunk and allowing the water in the boiler to go down thereby causing an explosion that tumbled the house into a mass of ruins and caused the death of many valuable lives. Men who get drunk should not be employed as locomotive engineers, indeed should not be employed in any responsible place.

The number of delegates to the State Prohibition Convention held at Harrisburg on the 19th was 774. The Third Party people made an effort to secure the organization of the convention but failed, Judge White, of Indiana county was elected permanent chairman. Men and women participated in the business before the convention. A colored man from Kentucky delivered an address. H. W. Palmer, of Wilkesbarre was elected State chairman. A six thousand dollar campaign fund was raised. Shelly Closs, of this place was put on the State Committee for Juniata.

From the New York Independent of the 21st inst. We shall see what we shall see at the inauguration ball, modern waltzing and decollete dresses. People's tastes differ as to what is decent and modest. An Eastern woman as she walks may draw her robe up to her knees without immodesty, but shame on her if she allows her face to be seen. The Western woman of fashion must keep her ankles covered, but sees no harm in removing the vail from her face and shoulders. If our habits of civilization have so far sublimated the imaginations of men and women that the embrace of the waltz is no more suggestive of impropriety than a hand-shake, and if the "full dress" of a ball room is as icily null as the undress of an African belle, there can be no more objection to the one than to the other. But, nevertheless, we are glad to hear it reported that Mrs. Harrison has had a quarrel with her dressmaker, and refuses to wear the decollete dress herself. Thanks to Mrs. Harrison.

Prohibition a Right Principal.

Objection is sometimes made to the Constitutional Amendment to be submitted to the voters of Pennsylvania next June, that it abridges the liberty of the people by prohibiting a business claiming to be lawful and right. The following facts prove the unreasonableness of the objection.

1st. Prohibition is a right and just principle, applied in all good and successful governments, and notably in our own.

All criminal acts are rightly prohibited and penalties imposed upon their perpetrators. Murder, arson, theft &c., are not and never should be licensed.

Every illegitimate business, such as counterfeiting, burglary, horse-stealing, gambling, is justly and unqualifiedly prohibited by law, and those who follow such unlawful callare or ought to be tried, convicted and punished even though they may claim to make it a business and are endeavoring to support their families thereby or to amass wealth for other legitimate purposes.

Why are counterfeiters and burglars not allowed to ply their trades or take out a license? Manifestly because their business is injurious to the people generally and particularly, and no sane man or good citizen ever doubts the propriety of abridging their liberty and prohibiting such nefarious business.

Even a business not generally hurtful, but delecterious to the interests of a large class in the state is often prohibited by law. For instance the manufacture and sale of Oleomargerine as a substitute for butter, is if I mistake not unlawful in Pennsylvania. Why? Not because it is necessarily unhealthy, but because it is injurious by its competition with the dairy interests. What right has the state of Pennsylvania to abridge the liberties of oleomargerine manufacturer and prohibit him from following his business? manifestly because the interests of the many should be protected for the greed of the few.

Carrying on business on the Lord's day is forbidden by the law, and might be suppressed everywhere, so the Sabbath may be properly observed and the needed day of rest secured to hard-working laborers, even though some may object ceasing their labor and consider their liberty abridged, for God's law and humanity's demands are of greater importance than mere individual preference.

Our game and fish laws are instances of prohibition by which the liberty of the individual sportsman to take or kill what and when he pleases is wisely abridged in order to preserve animals or birds or fish, from destruction by ruthless hands to the injury of the interests of others.

Surely no enlightened citizen, who has at heart the interest of his country and state does make objection to prohibition in these and many other cases that may be cited. Why then should objection be made to the prohibition of a business which has entailed on the people of our land so much crime, ruin, disaster, poverty and wretchedness as the liquor traffic has done.

2nd. Prohibition has been and is now justly and correctly applied to the liquor business to some extent, and if partly, why not wholly?

The present law prohibits and refuses to allow to engage in the liquor troffic any one who is a foreigner, who has been convicted of a crime, who is not of known sobriety and good character, who is not a bona fide proprietor of the saloon for which he asks license, who has any interest in any other saloon, who cannot show the saloon to be necessary to the convenience of the neighborhood or who cannot secure two bondsmen in the town or township having the financial ability prescribed by the law. Every one not having a license issued by the judges of the proper court is entirely and strictly prohibited from engaging in the business of selling liquor. All whether with license or without are prohibited from selling liquor on Sunday, on election days to minors and instructors. Surely, here is prohibition applied to this traffic, and every good citizen is willing to stand by the law, even though the liberty of some is abridged.

But why is this business so burdened with restrictions and prohibitions beyond all other kinds of ordinary kinds of business. If it is lawful and right as a business, it ought to be as free for anyone to sell whisky as to sell sugar.

Why is it lawful to sell to a minor molesses or calico and unlawful to sell brandy?

Why is it lawful to furnish an inebrinte with bread and flour, and unlawful to fill him up with rum or gin? Manifestly because of the evil effects of the liquor traffic on these and for their protection from the horrid curse. And if a prohibition law is necessary to protect minors and inebriates why not extend it to protect all?

Why is it unlawful to sell liquor on election days, and lawful for licenses only on other days? Manifestly, that citizens should be in their sober senses when casting their ballots. But do they not need to be in their sober senses on other days, at other work also? Is not soberness better than drunkenness all the time? It is not an arraignment of the liquor traffic as inherently evil that it is prohibited on election day? Is it not plain that it is an evil, that must be restrained at times, not because of any mere accessory to the business or perversion of it, but from the actual evil in itself? therefore it ought to prohibit at all times and all places just as gambling, counterfeiters and other nefarious pursuits are prohibited. This can and ought to be done by embodying in the Constitution of the state, the amendment to be voted for next June.

It it is right to deprive the whole body of people in the state of the privelege of selling liquor, except a few favored with license, surely it is right to deprive these few of that privelege also. Hence the amendment ought to be passed by a large majority of our citizens of our sovereign state for the welfare of our people and protection of our homes.

A. VOTER.
