

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, 1899.

B. F. SCHWEIER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Governor FORAKER has been re-nominated for the 3rd term.

Astronomers say the little spot on the Sun is 24,000 miles across.

Is the Paris exposition only two exhibits are closed on Tuesday—the United States and England.

Astronauts sent her 4th of July celebration fund to Johnston for distribution among the sufferers.

The Republican State Convention will meet on the 7th of August to nominate a candidate for State Treasurer.

On May 30th the date of the Johns town flood disaster, a flood caused by a rainfall of 29 inches of water, deluged Hong Kong, China. Particulars are looked for by next steamer.

Religious insanity induced Miss Leonie Sewall of N. Jersey to attempt to crucify herself to her chamber door. She succeeded in nailing one foot and one hand to the door.

The platform of the Republican State Convention of Ohio has declared in favor of granting a pension to every honorably discharged union soldier and sailor of the late war against human slavery.

By the vote of the suffrage amendment it is clearly demonstrated that the people of this Commonwealth desire that every man who wishes to vote shall pay tax. Now let the people see to it that every man pays his own tax.

The Supreme Court of this state has decided that wholesale liquor dealers, brewers or bottlers are entitled to license if they are men of temperate habits and moral character, against whom no reprimand or objection on the record has been made.

It is claimed that the long looked for Fountain of Youth has been found in Story county, Nevada, where by bathing white hair is turned to its original color, wrinkled faces become smooth and rosy and youthful appearance, the stooped form becomes erect and the step elastic.

Mrs. who claim to know say that Pennsylvania receives on an average 36 inches of water—rain fall every year. The rain that caused the late great flood began to fall on Thursday, May 30, and within the hours of ten o'clock A. M. on that day, and 1 o'clock on Saturday morning June 1st, 9 inches of water fell in the valley of the Juniata, which was one fourth of the average yearly water supply from the clouds. In view of such statistics the flood of June 1st 1889 is not to be wondered at.

England and Portugal are in trouble about a railroad in which the English are interested. The railroad crosses Portuguese territory in East Africa. The British Railroad had right of way, to build the road, but failing to complete it within a certain time the Portuguese government claimed the right to set aside rights that had been granted to the English Company and the local government, that is the Portuguese government in Africa allowed the rails of the road to be torn up. The old way would be to go to war about the trouble, but the present time's way is to make Portugal pay damages, if she has violated the rights of England.

The public improvements of this Commonwealth cost about $40,000,000, and were completed across the mountain to Pittsburgh in 1834, under Governor Wolf. The debt entailed by their construction has not all been paid. Under Governor Pollock the canals were all sold to the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1857. The State operated the canals during a period of only 23 years. In every county through which the canals pass fortunes were built by men who were connected with canal management. In a number of counties along the Juniata river fortunes that were made off the canal management lost heavily by the flood of the first of last June. And the flood calamity at Johnston would not have taken place if the canal reservoir had not been built in the mountain. However men may reason from such facts, thousands of people whose fortunes and homes had no connection with state canal management were injured and in some instances destroyed by the flood.

GENERAL SIMON CAVENOR, died on his farm in Dutchman county on the 26th of June aged 90 years. His father died when Simon was a small boy and left him without means, which the General in his mature years considered was of great advantage to him as it made himself independent and self reliant. He learned the printing trade and by saving money that he earned, he became a newspaper proprietor and editor, but because there was more money in banking, and canal and railroad contracting, he became a banker and contractor. Turning his attention to politics he United States Senator, Secretary of War and Minister to Russia. His methods in politics were never approved of except by his friends of whom he had many and who leaned upon him for political advancement. He gave the closest attention to the matters of appointment both great and small for those who served him and in that way became a power in the politics of the state and nation. His business foresight was as penetrating as his political ambition was eager and he amassed a large fortune. His funeral took place from the Front Street mansion at Harrisburg on the 27th day of June.

The Brooks liquor law was passed May 13, 1887, and the wholesale liquor license law under which the Supreme Court recently passed a decision, was passed eleven days later—namely May 24, 1887. Under the wholesale act dealers cannot sell by the drink. They may sell by the quart or more and they are not subject to the strict regulations of the act of May 13, 1887. The objection or remonstrance that there is no necessity for such a place, or that people do not want a liquor selling place cannot be considered. There are three points open for remonstrance against the granting of wholesale liquor license. If the applicant for license is not a citizen of the United States a remonstrance will lie against him. If the applicant for license is a man of intemperate habits the remonstrance will lie against him. If an applicant is not a man of good moral character a remonstrance will lie against him. And thus it will be seen at a glance that the three points that prevent a man from securing a wholesale license to sell liquor is that of being a foreigner, an intemperate man and an immoral man.

CAPTAIN DAWSON of Charleston, South Carolina had a young pretty girl in his family as house maid. Dr. McDOW of the same city—a man of family gave attention to the pretty Swiss girl and met her out for improper purpose. The girl seemingly did not suspect the doctor's intentions. The Captain, however, claimed to understand McDOW's purpose, and after having witnessed a walk of the girl and the doctor he called at McDOW's office and while there was shot dead by Dawson. The Captain says the fuss was about the girl, and that McDOW attacked him and in self defense he shot the doctor. Dawson was put upon trial for murder before a jury composed of 7 colored men and 5 white men. They were out two hours, and returned a verdict of "not guilty." The verdict has awakened a general interest throughout the country and most all the papers in the Northern States condemn the murder while the Southern papers to a certain degree claim to believe that Dawson went into the Doctor's office and began to "bully" him about the girl and threatened him with chastisement till McDOW shot him.

Red Nosed Mike Hung.

Michael Rizzolo—Red nosed Mike was hung at Wilkesbarre on the 25th of June, for the murder of Paymaster J. B. McClure and Hugh Flanagan. In company with two others the murder was committed on the mountain road at Miner's Mill, Luzerne county on October 10, 1887. There was no doubt about his guilt for during his trial he made the following confession.

"One day about two months before the murder, Antonio Hoppello, Berberino and myself went down to the creek and shot some dynamite into the water to kill fish. While there Berberino and I had a revolver. Then we went up to shanty No. 7. While there Berberino said: 'We ought to get that money from that paymaster when he comes up the road. The three of us can do it easily without being discovered.' Antonio and I said: 'Yes, we are satisfied.' We went to the shanty and for two or three days said nothing about the proposed robbery and three or four days after Berberino came to me and said:

"About two or three days afterwards I went to Wilkesbarre on business. Berberino went with me, and while going down the road he was looking for a good place to do the murder. He mentioned two or three places as good ones, and I said, 'Yes.' A few days after I had to go to Wilkesbarre; he said he would go with me as he wanted to buy that rifle. I went into a jewelry store; the young man in the store showed a Winchester rifle, and how it worked. Berberino looked at it and was pleased with it and wanted to buy it, but did not have enough money. The man wanted $18 for the rifle, so I asked the man if he would trust him (Berberino) for $3, and if he did not pay it at the 20th of the month I would pay it. He let him have the rifle. Then we left the store and went to Parsons. On the way to the shanty, Berberino was hunting a place to hide the rifle; he found a place about a quarter or a half mile from No. 7 shanty, along side a creek under a big stone or rock under a big tree.

went down to my father's shanty No. 4, and got a note that McClure had sent saying he wanted to see me about $270. It was raining and I did not think they would go to get the money, so I went to the dump and saw them start. I met them close by the tunnel by the bridge; it was raining, and I said: 'Good morning; it's a bad morning.' The old man said: 'It's raining, but nothing more was said. Then they got to the place where we were to meet they were not there. Then I went to Miner's mills to Quigley's. I staid there for about a couple of hours, and when it was 10 o'clock I started. I had two or three glasses of whisky and I started out pretty fast but did not run. I met several Italians on the way and when I got to the hill where Mrs. Apple lives I met two wagons, and when I got close to the forks, McClure and Flanagan passed me, but I did not speak to them.

"When they got to the little hill they went slow and I followed them. I saw Berberino come up and shoot from the bushes. He shot McClure twice in the back. Then he shot the other man, but I don't think he hit him. Then Villia came up in front of them and shot the other man twice in the face. Then they had a fight and I saw them running after them. The horse ran away and McClure was hanging with his feet under the wheel. When they got twenty or thirty yards the old man fell out, and Villia ran away down the road and Berberino looked at me mad and told me to come. I went with him, and when they got to the place where they afterwards found the horse he stopped and then Berberino again in the hand.

"He shot a good many times at the horse. I was standing still and he cursed me and got very white and said: 'Here you hold this gun and if anybody comes you kill them.' I held it, and with the knife he cut the straps that held the valve to the buggy, then put the valve on his shoulders and said: 'Let us go through here.' It was raining and muddy and we went up and took the money and hid it a couple of miles from the scene of the murder; also the gun. We then went to my shanty and I found the people there had been drinking; they had not heard of the murder. I changed my shoes and stockings and put my other pants on and went to Frank's. I told him for some time he said he did not have any, then went to my old man's and while I was following the road I saw a fellow who told me of the murder. I then went to No. 4; then came up again to my shanty. Berberino was with me all this time.

When we got to the shanty we found Vigano's men waiting for us going towards the shanty, and Berberino said to me, now mind and be careful how you talk. If I've got to be you die with me. But the detectives only wanted to ask us if we saw anybody go down the road, and I pretended to be looking for the name of a man. Joe Petro was the first one who said anything to me about it. He asked me where Berberino had been, and said: 'He's a bad man.' We got back to Yatesville and then went to Miner's Mills. That was all we did the day of the murder. I next saw the money on the afternoon of the following day. I went with Berberino; Villia did not want to go with us. Berberino opened the silver chest and asked me, how if I had a couple of $50 notes and some small bills. A couple of days after he wanted me to take this money to Philadelphia, and said any time I wanted it I could go there and get it. I said: you can carry the money away; I don't want to have anything to do with it. When I went to New York he said he wanted to go to Philadelphia, but would not go away until he saw me.

"When I went to Philadelphia and inquired for Berberino I found he had gone. Civacco came with me when I came to the agency in Philadelphia. Berberino did not tell me where the money would be put in Philadelphia. He said he wanted to change it in New York to Italian money and take it to Italy. Berberino and Villia were together all the time. Finemco is short, stout built, with a very small black mustache, sharp teeth, face a little red, and a nose. His number was 199. He boarded at our shanty. The blacksmith also boarded there. Since Berberino went away I have not heard from him. In Italy he goes to Madduna, Province of Calabria. Villia went to the same place. They live about three miles apart. An old fellow at the works heard from Berberino since he arrived in Italy. We are afraid we might meet a spy, and by walking off the bridge; be cautious there is danger.

Two Boatmen Fight. From the Newport News of July 5. Frank Beigh, of Liverpool, and George Lincoln Shelby, of New Buffalo, were among the small army of boatmen who have been assisting with their teams to repair the damage done by the flood to the canal at the aqueduct, nine miles east of this place. The former is captain of a pair of the canal company's double boats, and the latter runs a single company boat. Mr. Beigh has a wife and three children. He is a man of mature years, stout and healthy, and weighs about 200 pounds. Mr. Shelby is married, but has no children. He is a son of Mrs. Eliza Shelby, a respectable widow residing in East Newport. He is 25 years of age and weighs about 150 lbs. He is a good swimmer and a good diver.

latter overtook the former before either had reached their objective point, and when Beigh saw that Shelby might drive around him he got to Shelby. "What are you doing?" The latter replied that he "could pass him," both assuming a defiant yet apparent, good-natured attitude.

Without putting up any money, they each bet the other a dollar on the result of who should first arrive at the tree. A race ensued and Shelby passed Beigh. This seems to have angered the latter and the two became involved in a war of words. Lincoln called Frank a Liverpool scoundrel which followed true to the spirit of Shelby's over-assertion and under-assertion. The latter then flourished his whip and lashed Beigh across the face. Beigh wrenched the whip from Shelby and with the butt end hit him on the head and knocked him off his wagon. Shelby jumped to his feet and, picking up a stone, hurled it at Beigh and hit him in the side. Frank picked up the same stone and threw at Lincoln, hitting him in the back. The latter then started to run away from his power, but a fragment fell over a pile of stones. Beigh followed after and, while Shelby lay on the ground, kicked the prostrate man in the face and back, stunning him so that he was unable to rise.

At this juncture Henry Scantling, an under boss at the works, came up and appealed to Beigh to stop his assault on Shelby, saying he told enough. Mr. Scantling also told Beigh to go to his team. He then insisted Lincoln to arise and set him down on a plank, near by. In the meantime Beigh was driving his mules to a place to feed. Shelby having partially recovered from the stunning effects of the terrible punishment inflicted by his antagonist, took up another stone and threw it at Frank. It landed on his temple and knocked him off his wagon to the ground, where he lay quivering and unconscious as the wheels of his vehicle just escaped his head.

Some one shouted to Lincoln, "now you have done it," when two or more Liverpool boatmen started after him with stones in their hands as he ran, but were stopped in their pursuit of the young man by the intervention of a big fellow whose name was not to be known. The latter ran to collector Briner's office, where his face was washed and his wounds were dressed. He was severely punished having an ugly cut over one of his eyes, while his face was painfully contused and bruised. Later he was taken home. He reported at the works on Monday morning.

While Lincoln was receiving the attention the nature of his injuries made necessary, Frank had been lifted up and carried under the "winding bridge," in the shade. He was permitted to lie there unobtrusively, but as no signs of returning conscience were apparent he was removed to the residence of Dr. G. N. Beuter. Medical attention was given to him by several house physicians, but he must necessarily have died had he not survived his injuries. He became conscious some time during Saturday night or Sunday morning, and was taken home Sunday afternoon. Rumors here on Monday that he had died were fortunately incorrect, and, at last accounts he was getting along fairly well, although it is said weeks or months may elapse before his complete recovery will have been realized.

JUNIATA NEWS.

Fat and Biddy are still alive and are hale and hearty they are busily engaged in reaping the golden harvest which has been so bountifully gifted to us. Biddy is not a lazy wife, she is a real angel, she is not a rose, neither is she a rose between two thorns. Beauty thinks he knows us but he is badly fooled, but we know who Beauty is, altho he lives a good many miles from us. Farmers are busily engaged in making hay, the grass crop is pretty fair one.

I. C. Kurtz has started quite a number of hands to packing berries on his fruit farm, he has quite a lot of choice berries. Michael Musser has presented himself with a binder. Otes Rumberger who has been to the west has returned home. The wheat is ready to reap. A violent rain storm passed through this place on Monday the 1st of July. J. R. Adams and A. A. Landis took a pleasure trip on Saturday and Sunday.

J. L. we are informed you have in the past had some attraction at Goodville, look out that, that attraction don't attack you. C. L. When you go wandering in the dark, better take a lantern along or you might make a speary and by walking off the bridge; be cautious there is danger. W. we notice you are breaking towards the cider press frequently. C. we think that watch must get out of order pretty often, we see you traveling down the road pretty often.
