The opening paper by Frederick Harrison is an interesting analysis of what was no complished for good and evil by the revolution of 1789, a subject of endless fascination even after a century of discussion. An able writer shows up "The Vitality of Protectionist Fallacies," and the causes for it. Dr. Robson Roose'has something to say on the art of prolonging life, which will engage the attention of every reader. "The Wit and Wisdom Schopenhauer" is the tithe of a readable paper. One of the brightest papers in the number is Lady Randolf Churchill's talk about Russia which is characterized by trite American vivacity. Mrs. Priestley's article ou "The Mysteries of Maleria," will be sure to excite interest, which may also be said of Mr. Dicey.'s "Ethics of Political Lying." Sir Morell McKenzie gives the weight of his experience and knowledge to the discussion of the voice as some one had coal clied the window frame and set it on fire. He extinguished the fire before serious damage was done. This is the mill known as the Eerkey mill. He does not known as a bear sodier, a good form as the continuous fine voices.
