

Seven inches of snow fell in Colorado on the 29th of October.

Snow was heavy enough last Thursday in Western Nebraska to halt railroad trains.

A wealthy tobacco dealer was shot while robbing a store in Canada recently at night. He of course was an old offender, but had never been suspected of being a burglar. He was a leading church member, Sunday school man, &c.

Edward Everett Hale's Impression of President Harrison.

I saw President Harrison first in the Senate Chamber and on the platform of the Capitol at his inauguration; I saw him next at the magnificent dinner-party in New York at the Grand Opera House on the 20th of April, and I have seen him now. And I am sure of this: there is in him a genuine vein of imagination, one might say of poetry which you do not find in mere politicians, and which is not often found in statesmen. Do you not remember how, in those little speeches in the days of the canvass, he always struck some unexpected note, and told the heroes something they had never thought of before? Well that belongs to this imaginative faculty. In the Senate Chamber while the formal proceedings belonging to the new birth went on, this man sat as if he were dreaming. He was not looking on any person or anything he was looking into Eternity. Half an hour after I stood behind him when he was delivering his inaugural. The rain was pouring in sheets and drops. The water rolled down the paper in his hand, and dripped inky from its lower margin. Yet he stood as if wholly unconscious of the elements and delivered that speech with energy like Napoleon's at the bridge of Lodi rain or no rain—what was that? His business was to say how the Republic should be maintained. Again; at the Opera House he sat through five hours of the worst speaking you ever heard. Ten worse speeches than were spoken there are not to be found in literature.

I watched him again—listening! Yes, in a fashion; but all the time he listened, dreaming, if you please, fancying, imagining. At the end of that evening I think he had a fuller and better idea of what was in that theater than any other man there.

And then, after the dreariness of those ten speeches he was called up. He spoke perhaps ten minutes. The speech was entirely ex tempore in form. It was pathetic, it was humorous at times, it was tender, it was dignified. It held the tired audience as only perfect speaking does or can; and people went away more alive for it, more glad of the Centennial, more awake to all it had to teach the nation. So quickened were they indeed, that almost everyone of them will tell you now that all the speaking of the evening was admirable. For the end of a battle is what makes it a victory or failure. Now, here he is again not with a picked audience of a thousand representatives of the best life in America, but with a merry, laughing crowd of three or four thousand Portsmouth people who want to see a President. Once more he enters wholly into the occasion, is wholly at ease and natural, laughs with those who laugh as he shakes hands with those who shake hands. All this is genuine. Old John Adams, or his son—or Martin Van Buren, or James Buchanan, or Polk or Johnson or any of that sort—might as well have tried to fly as to enter with such simplicity, sympathy and dignity into the life of those who are crowding around him.—Exchange.

Shot Dead. Pauline Hagley and John Shubert were employed at the bakery of Joseph Dittenhofer at West Chester, Pa. the former as a girl of all work and the latter as a baker. On Saturday morning November 2, Shubert was robbing shooting and as he left the bakery, Pauline remarked that she would pay him twenty five cents for every rabbit he shot.

That evening she went to a friend's house on West Chestnut street where she was soon joined by Shubert with a gun but no rabbits. Pauline began twisting him at his lack of luck when he pointed his supposed empty gun at her and pulling the trigger, shot her dead. He at once gave himself up to the police and was subsequently exonerated by the coroner's jury. Shubert, may and he may not have shot the girl intentionally but the fact that he aimed the gun at her and pulled the trigger is against him. He merits severe punishment.

Boys in Japan. In the province of Kiangsu, near a temple, in a boys' school, while a teacher was called away one day, all the boys except one, with the intention of playing a joke on the teacher, hid in empty coffins that were in the temple.

Many of the young people of this place attended a party on Halloween at the home of Ex-Sheriff Landon at East Point and spent the evening in playing many of the games that properly belong to that mystic eve.

Keep Phosphate Out of the Way. From the Newport Ledger: Farmers who are in the habit of allowing their phosphate to lie about, and empty bags to be thrown where the cattle can get them, will take warning from the following: George Rhoads lives on D. V. Grant's farm about two and a half miles above Newport, and had used some phosphate as a fertilizer. In taking the stuff into the carriage house he spilled some on the sill at the door, and a sack of it was set in a corner among some agricultural machinery.

A Little Grave. In the old grave yard quiet and still. On the north side of a beautiful hill, is a little grave that's neatly made, In which my darling boy was laid.

Delaware Notes. Mr. Editor: I will now after a long tour through the country resume the duties and responsibilities of a correspondent and come to the front once more. I see that all the other correspondents have settled down behind the stove to smoke the pipe of peace in the rear. Beauty speaks of me as having crossed the Alps. I think will find Beauty in the Australian mines where no newspaper correspondent can reach him to arrange him about things that appeared in the columns of the "Sentinel." I hope too that when the "Pall Mall Gazette," of London sends a reporter that Beauty will be called upon to fill the position. On my journey I met and had a pleasant chat with Pat and Biddy. They lit the thought they were entertaining the eminent Sir George Tullious. I saw Beauty, Ah! Beauty is a dandy fellow.

The scope of the meeting has far outgrown the original indications and in view of these considerations the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has arranged to sell excursion tickets to all visitors to Baltimore on this occasion at a single fare for the round trip.

Interested People. Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

Husking Corn by Machinery. On Saturday a machine for husking corn was in actual operation at the Highland dairy farm of T. B. Wetzel near this city and did satisfactory work. The corn stalks were fed through the machine butts first as fast as one man could handle them. The stalks were cut and crushed by the machine and the corn delivered in a wagon. A large crowd of farmers and others were present to witness the test of the machine which did its work effectively and satisfactorily. The day of husking corn by hand is about over, and the husker will follow the thrasher as surely as the thrasher follows the binder. Lock Haven Republican.
